

A Back-breaking Job

BLANKETS, bed spreads, sheets and other large pieces seem to weigh a ton apiece when they are in water.

Of course these things can be washed at home, but it's a heavier job than any woman ought to do—and many a backache has been the result.

The place for these things to be washed is the laundry. We are equipped to handle this heavy work. The home isn't.

Send us your blankets, bed spreads and sheets for the sake of your poor back.

PUBLIC LIBRARY

Open week days, 9 to 12; 1 to 6 and 7 to 9. Located one block south of the Army and Navy Center. No War Tax on You at the Public Library.

Entrance free, books free (except fifteen or twenty in the Rent Collection, and they only at the price of one car-fare). Take all you want and enjoy yourself without running up your living cost. This library has books on how to plan and plant your garden, what to do this autumn for next year's crop; how to harvest and store food; how to preserve and can what you do not use; how to cook, how to use left-overs; how to keep yourself fit; and how to run your business with profit. If others beat the high cost of living, you can. The people who KNOW HOW win out. Will you win out or be loser? Get books at the Public Library and LEARN HOW! The H. C. of L. will prove the survival of the fittest. Which will you be?

"How to Prepare for Civil Service" by E. H. Cooper is one of the new efficiency books. It has an exceptionally fine chapter at the end of the book on Choosing a Vocation, which will be helpful to a great many who do not contemplate Civil Service but who have to decide that momentous question for themselves, or for some one else. The preface claims that "this book starts with early life and shows, step by step, how individuals may of their own initiative and without means, attain a good education, lucrative position, and success."

Mr. and Mrs. William Fehd of Glencoe were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Willman Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Bingham of Irving Park spent the week end with Mrs. Bingham's mother, Mrs. Amelia Pyle.

Muller and family, Misses Eleanor and Janet Putnam of Arlington Heights, Mr. Wallace Putnam, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Putnam of Wauconda, Thomas Putnam and Miss Isabelle Wauhamam of Harvey.

Delbert Meyer gave a farewell party for Eleanor Tuesday evening and Elizabeth Reichelt entertained for her Wednesday evening. Eleanor left Thursday for Great Falls, Mont.

Max Winter and George Karch returned from France Saturday, Louis Beckman Sunday and Harry Mau on Friday. All of them were in service almost two years. Max Winter was in a few minor battles, George was on his way to the front when the armistice was signed.

when he was cremated: "There sat Sam, looking cool and calm, in the heart of the furnace roar; And he wore a smile you could see a mile, and he said, 'Please close the door.'"

It's fine in here, but I greatly fear you'll let in the cold and storm— Since I left Plumtree, down in Tennessee, it's the first time I've been warm."

There are strange things done in the midnight sun By the men who toil for gold; The arctic trails have their secret tales That would make your blood run cold; The northern lights have been queer sights, But the queerest they ever did see Was that night on the marge of Lake Lebarge I cremated Sam McGee."

"The Spell of the Yukon" begins with this verse which shows so ably his philosophy of life: "I wanted gold and I sought for it; I scurried and mucked like a slave. Was it famine or scurvy—I fought it; I hurled my youth into a grave. I wanted the gold, and I got it— Came out with a fortune last fall— Yet somehow life's not what I thought it.

And somehow the gold isn't all." It carries with it the strange completeness of "too late" whose only consolation is that it may help some one else. The gold is a most marvelous means to an end, but why sacrifice one's own happiness and that of others—the ultimate end, isn't it? For, "somehow the gold isn't ALL."

"The Young Visitors" is a most suspicious piece of nonsense which purports to have been dragged from her trunk by a now-famous authoress, and to have been written by her at the naive age of nine years. The introduction is written in all solemnity by J. M. Barrie, but as Daisy Ashford is so little known is it not suspiciously like a new brand of Barrie fun? Read it and see. It is a delicious little novel. The characterization is rare:

"Mr. Salteena was an elderly man of 42 and was fond of asking people to stay with him." "Can't you see him?" "He had quite a young girl staying with him of 17 named Ethel Monticue. Mr. Salteena had dark short hair and mustache which were very black and twisty. He was middle sized and had very pale blue eyes. He had a pale brown suit but on Sundays he had a black one and he had a topper every day as he thought it more becoming..." Each page is full of laughter for sophisticated readers of novels. It is well worth reading aloud, but if you have scruples about being conspicuous, do not plan to read it on the train, for you will surely laugh out loud, involuntarily.

"The Re-creation of Brian Kent" is the latest Harold Bell Wright novel with the local color of his "Shepherd of the Hills" country. The story is charming in description and tense and dramatic action. Over eight million copies have been sold. Other novels by this same author are "The Winning of Barbara Worth," "The Calling of Dan Matthews," and "When a Man's a Man," and others in the Public Library.

Margaret Ridlon, Librarian.

This is the time of family reunions, and your relatives do seem like awful nice folks when you only see 'em once a year.
