Mary Greeley sat knitting at her desk in a private office of the Woodworth Manufacturing company, where for ten years she had typed for the engineer. Through the opened sliding windows in the partition, which separated her sanctum from the counting room, she could plainly hear Daymaster Truesdale and Mr. Dooling, the bookkeeper, straightening out the payroll. There was also an occasional word from the traveling man, Mr. Bangs.

"Oh, dear!" mused Mary, sighing, as she caught a glimpse of herself in the large mirror over Mr. Robey's desk across the room. "I'm surely getting old, yet I'd do it over again just the same. Anyway, mother had every comfort while she lived, if we did live in two rooms. There'll always be comfort for me in the remembrance of that. No, I have no regrets, but I can't deny that I am very lonesome."

Mary was getting old. She had just ripened into full womanhood with no more plumpness than that which belongs to the well-rounded curves of twenty-eight. Always attractive, with her perfectly matured grace and poise, she was now positively beautiful.

And so the young men in the counting room must have thought, for all of them had proposed during her years at the plant. On being refused, they had one by one found a life partner elsewhere.

"No," Mary had told them. "While mother lives my sole duty is to care for her." And she had cared for her most tenderly until the end, which was now a year back.

"Miss Greeley," called Truesdale through the partition windows, "have you heard whether we're to have time off to see the president? I believe he is to land at eleven at Commonwealth pier."

"Yes," smiled Mary sweetly. "But I hear Mr. Robey talking just outside our door. He has just been to tell the department heads. Here he is—he'll tell you himself."

The engineer, who enjoyed the same princely salary as the general manager, was, owing to the absence of the latter, in full charge. He opened the door and announced:

"They are going to knock off at 11:30. I advise that you go to the other end of the works. You can see the president plainly from the windows there."

"All right, thank you," came from Truesdale. "But we have a little more to do."

Mr. Robey, a short, stout, austere appearing little man, with steely cold blue eyes and a closely trimmed vandyke, now bustled himself with a blue-print.

"What a pity," thought Mary, her eyes running casually over him. "What a queer person he is, to be sure—living in a lovely house with no wife—only a man for cook and housekeeper. And no golf, no tennis, no club, except the yacht club, and only speed boats for a hobby. Well, he is a bachelor at thirty-five. I suppose he'll always stay single."

"Well, it is 11:30," announced that gentleman rising, watch in hand. "I think I'll move down to the other end of the building."

When near the office, Mary met Mr. Robey, who smiled at the coincidence of their both returning. "I am going for a cigar," he explained. Then he courteously opened the door and they entered. Crossing the soft carpeted floor they went to their desks for the sought-for articles.

Mary had picked up her knitting and was rising to go, and Mr. Robey had just found his cigars, but sat glancing at a blueprint when:

"Robey is a boob!" It was Truesdale talking.

"Nothing less," agreed Bangs. The engineer and his secretary both held high ideals. Although they abhorred eavesdropping, their surprise held them spellbound.

"Why, just think of it!" expatiated Truesdale, as he struck a light for his cigar. "Here is a man thrown into the daily companionship of the loveliest and warmest-hearted girl in all Boston and he hasn't known enough in all these years to make love to her. Ugh! I'm disgusted with his blindness!"

"Same here!" offered Bangs. "He sees no beauty in anything but a confounded old engine!"

"If I were he," came from Dooling. "I wouldn't wait a minute. I'd say, 'Mary, will you marry me?'"

Stam! went the door.

As the young men's footsteps grew fainter down the corridor, Mr. Robey looked up from his blueprint and across the room at Mary, who had slumped into her chair with her head bent forward and her eyes resting confusedly on the desk.

Crossing the room the dapper little man laid one hand very tenderly on Mary's shoulder; with the other he took her right hand and raising it to his lips declared:

"It was pretty queer, Miss Greeley, but it was true. You heard what Dooling said, 'I'd say, Mary, will you marry me?' Now I intended to ask you this. I ask you now. Will you? Oh, will you, dear?"

Mary, still deeply crimsoned, looked up through glistering eyes, and Mr. Robey, seeing love and happiness in the glance, stooped and kissed her.

Hand in hand, they sauntered down the long passage in blissful content, to where the loud cheering announced the coming of the great exemplar of peace.

Didn't Quite Understand.

Little John and his mother were visiting at the minister's home one day, when John picked up a Testament from the table. The minister's wife said: "You must not play with that book, for it is God's book." A week later, while at the minister's home again, he spied the book and said: "Why doesn't God come and get his book?"

The Unknown Quantity.

When a thing like that happens a man does not know exactly where he is or how he feels. The largeness and the mystery of the world amaze him; the mystery of life bewilders him; he is confused in the presence of the unknown quantity. How he behaves, what he says or does, depends entirely upon instincts beyond his control. This is what happened to Richard when he heard the voice of Carol.—Henry Van Dyke.

Ireland Still Medieval.

In Ireland we are still medieval, and think that how to live is more important than how to get a living. When I was a young man if I announced that I intended next morning at break of day to start on some enterprise of amusement, or it might be of high duty, the whole family would get up to see me off; but if it were on some matter of mere commercial gain, I would breakfast in the care of the servants. It was thus through the whole of Irish life.—John Butler Yeats.

Education Always Helps.

The success of the unlettered man is often argued to show that men do not need education. In special cases the truth may seem to be conclusive, but did you ever stop to inquire what the fellow might have become had he education added to his natural talents? He has succeeded in spite of a handicap and not because of it.

Popular Names for Towns.

There are 31 Franklins given in the latest United States postal guide. Chester and Clinton are close seconds, there being 30 towns and cities by each of these names in the United States. Washington and Newport come next in popularity, each having 28.

The Husband in Charge.

Wife—"Considering how long I've been away, I think you might have made some preparations to receive me." Husband—"You do me injustice, my dear. I have had the library and parlor thoroughly cleaned and aired." Servant (interrupting)—"Please, sir, the man has come with a barrow for them empty bottles."

HOME

Home not merely four square walls, though with pictures hung and gilded.
Home is where affection calls, filled with
Shrines the heart hath builded.
Home! Go watch the faithful dove, sailing beneath the heavens above;
Home is where there is one to love;
Home is where there is one to love us.

Home is not merely roof and room

It needs something to endear it; Home is where the heart can bloom Where there is some kind heart to cheer it.
What is home with none to meet
None to welcome, none to greet us?
Home is sweet and only sweet
Where there is one we love to meet us!

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE STARTS NEXT MONDAY

COUNTY'S QUOTA IS $16,300.00
Drive is for $2,250,000.00 of which $1,500,000.00 is to be raised in Cook County

The Salvation Army Home Service drive to be launched next Monday for the state of Illinois, outside of Cook county, was formally started at a meeting held in the Capitol at Springfield last Wednesday. Representatives from virtually every county in the state were present, as well as district and county chairmen. Mr. John O'Keefe of this city attended the meeting as a delegate from Lake county.

Leut. Governor Oglesby, in the absence of Governor Lowden, presided and endorsed the movement.

Mr. Peabody outlined the plan of campaign and urged an organization that would cover districts, counties, and precincts. He also said that the object of the drive was to raise $2,250,000 of which $1,500,000 was to be raised in the county of Cook, and the balance in the State; that among other things, the money was to be used for a New Rescue and Maternity Hospital with Training School for Salvation Army Nurses, three new slum centre buildings, addition to Young Woman's Boarding Home, Boys' Home and Trade School, a summer vacation home, new Salvation Army Hall, and relief centers all over the State.

Mr. Peabody urged that the Salvation Army organization be made a state institution similar to the Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, Jewish Charities and other great permanent organizations for the benefit of the people. He stated that no more than 6 per cent of all the money heretofore collected for Home Service Work in the Salvation Army organization had been expended for the maintenance of the organization itself, a remarkable record for economical distribution of charity.

Particular attention was called by Mr. Peabody to the personnel of the various state, district and county organizations and the high class of citizens who had engaged in this splendid work. Representative men from the City of Chicago are devoting their time and efforts to the work. Citizens of all nationalities and all religious denominations, as well as the Elks, Knights of Columbus, Y. M. C. A., the Jewish Charities, the American Legion, the labor organizations, in fact every great charitable organization is helping the drive. The returned soldiers must not be overlooked. They too are using every resource at their command to make the drive a success.

Quotas have been fixed for all the counties in the state, and it is the plan of the campaign directors to award honor flags to the county which reaches its quota, and another to the county making the highest per centage over its quota. The quota for Lake County is $16,300.

15,000 BOTTLES OF BEER SEIZED AT WOODSTOCK

Cases Heaped Together, Saturated with Kerosene and Burned Saturday Night

Cases containing 15,000 bottles of beer, confiscated under the search and seizure act, were burned Saturday at Woodstock, by order of Judge Barnes. The cases were heaped together, saturated with kerosene and a match applied. The bottles were seized enroute from Wisconsin to Chicago. All the defendants have pleaded guilty and been fined.

State Attorney James G. Welton of Lake County announces he is preparing plans to search every automobile, truck, or vehicle of any description crossing the Illinois-Wisconsin state boundary line.

Two guards will be placed on duty at every highway and trail, of which there are more than a dozen. In addition signs, illuminated by red lights, will be installed. They are read:

"State line of Illinois, south of motor cars will please stop for inspection by officers in charge. Order of the county board of supervisors."

By this plan it is hoped to end beer-rushing.
