NUMBER 30 THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1919

REFLECTING THE PRICE OF LIVESTOCK

In August prices dropped on livestock from $18.00 to $16.50 per hundred; hogs from $21.50 to $18.50; sheep from $11.00 to $10.50; lambs from $18.50 to $15.50. In these stressful times it should become the duty of every household buyer of meat to check up on these market prices and see if the local dealer has reflected to any noticeable extent the drop in the livestock market.

In a report made September 13th, and covering a month of retail prices, eight retail markets of various kinds were visited, and figures obtained, the result of which show an astonishing failure to reflect the livestock market. These meat markets were representative, covering a wide range of retail markets. There was the market which used 1 and 2 meat as leaders and carried on a bargain-seeking trade entirely, there was the cash and carry high grade market using No. 1 meat, the laboring class market, the market of average trade, the wholesale and retail market for restaurants, cafes, etc., millionaire trade market, carrying No. 1 meat only, and that of the mixed trade. Some of these, particularly the high class markets, did not show any change whatever in their retail prices while others showed a change in certain meats but not all. The total reflection in beef for the eight markets was $1.595, in pork $2.812, in mutton and lamb, no change whatever.

Investigations of this nature are constantly being made, but unless they are made intelligently, they are of no value. There are in the meat industry four distinct grades of meat, numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4. In the city of Chicago where seven thousand licenses have been issued to retail dealers, there is ample opportunity for a dishonest dealer to buy no. 1 meat cuts for his show window and sell to the bargain seeker No. 2 or No. 3, a practice which the public is helpless to prevent. Since it is impossible to educate the public to a degree where they could all buy meat intelligently, the only remedy which presents itself is the classification of butcher shops throughout the city. For instance, a market which buys and handles only No. 1 meat should be so labeled and so licensed, and similarly, one which handles and sells No. 2 and No. 3 cuts should be so labeled so that the public, on entering such a market should know just what to expect. Naturally it is the men who conduct this bargain counter trade who make the big money on meat.

There is a bill pending now in Congress which provides for the proper classification of retail meat markets, and meat of the first-class retail dealers of the country are pushing the bill. The packers, however, are said to be against such a law. It is a situation which lends itself readily to the perils of exploitation. The thing works both ways, but always disastrously for the uninformed; for instance the uninformed consumer sees a window filled with No. 1 cuts of the finest beef, and he goes in and purchases No. 3 and feels well satisfied with himself; on the other hand, the uninformed dealer pays for No. 1 meat, and sometimes gets No. 2 or 3.

By and large, what the public does not know about meats would fill several volumes. There are honest retail dealers, and plenty of them, who are quite anxious as we are to solve this case item in the high cost of living. That is why they are clamoring for the U. S. Government to classify the markets, and name them for what they are. It is another step along the line of the Pure Food and Drug Act.

NINETY-FOURTH BIRTHDAY

Following is a poem sent to Mrs. Salome Brand, better known to the community as Grandma Brand, by her nephew, Mr. S. S. Ott in commemoration of her ninety-fourth birthday, which was Sunday, September fourteenth.

The years are passing like a dream Or like some swiftly flowing stream; Months, weeks and days like hours fly Nor scarcely pause in passing by.

'Twas yesterday, with joy and mirth, We hailed the anniversary of thy birth; Today we meet again, with cheer, To celebrate the added year.

May boundless joy and peace be thine

And may God's favor on thee shine; Thy heart and soul be filled with love That flows from God's white throne above.

May every blessing earth can yield (And heavenly joys not yet revealed) Be thine through all unfinished days; May His own spirit guide thy ways;

Don't forget that we fill prescriptions and when we do so we do it right.
