WHY I BELIEVE IN SCOUTING

(By Mary Roberts Rhinehart)

Girls are great idealists. No one familiar with the working of the girl mind can fail to recognize how quickly they respond to ideals. They dream dreams, not of success, but of happiness. They look up rather than out.

But they are vague and uncertain, full of wistful yearnings that lead nowhere. Given a cause and a leader, and they will bring it to the utmost pathetic eagerness, staunchness, loyalty, enthusiasm and unselfish effort.

There comes a critical time in a girl's mental and spiritual life, when she is waiting impatiently for young womanhood. The things of her childhood have lost their interest. She has abandoned her dolls. The little boys she played with have deserted her, and found the girl-less associations of the teens. They have their clubs, their sports, their meeting places. But to the young girl there is nothing but that period of waiting. She is peculiarly isolated. Her family often finds her strange. She is moody and dreamy. She begins to spend an almost alarming amount of time and thought upon her appearance. The family says: "What in the world is the matter with Jane?" And her father suggests that it is too much going to the moving pictures.

But the truth is that Jane is idle. She does not belong, between babyhood and womanhood, anywhere in the social organization. She is active and romantic. Her days are long waiting for maturity, and with maturity the fulfillment of her dreams, of love, of marriage, of motherhood. She haunts the movies because she finds there vicarious romance and vicarious adventure. The great out-doors is hers to play in—on the screen.

And at the same time, with no increased outlet for her activities, her imagination is being stimulated as never before. Books, magazines, automobiles, moving pictures, all are revealing to her this strange thing we call life, which is hers to observe but not yet to live. She is a yearning on-looker.

It is time to realize that hundreds of thousands of young girls in this country, doubly important now that they are future citizens and the potential mothers of future citizens—that these young girls be given occupation, a feeling of responsibility, a practical ideal to which they may bring their innate loyalty and enthusiasm. They need organized play and athletics. They need something concrete to tie to. They need to be taught, if you please, what is the "gang" spirit among the boys. They need to learn that their young bodies are to be used, instead of decorated. Until they learn that we shall have sickly mothers and puny babies. No single movement for the improvement of American people as a race, no advance of science or sanitation, can compare in importance with the necessity for building up morally, spiritually and bodily, our future mothers.

They need to be taught certain loyalties, sex loyalty. Loyalty to ideals. Loyalty to country. This last, loyalty to country, has to be taught. When a man learns to take off his hat to the flag, he has a new respect for it.

Some of the girls need to be taught honesty. They cover their dreams with small deceptions. They seek romance out of sheer boredom, and are driven into hypocrisy. The boy has fewer dreams to conceal, and he is honest with the honesty of fresh air and the great out of doors. When

Young Man, Stick on the Farm

Editorial from The Chicago Tribune:

THE boy who sits on the top of the world these days is the farmer. He is there. He can go to his dairy for his milk and the kids can gather the eggs. His potatoes are in his bins. His salt pork is in brine and hams are in the smoke house. He can carry his own wheat to the mill.

He is a going concern if the world suspends. Sell your factory and buy a farm. The worst walkout is that of the cattle from the field into the corn. The worst lockout is that of forgetting the key.

Young man, stick on the farm. There is nothing in the west but bolsheviks and nothing east but labor conferences. Buy a phonograph and a phord, put in a telephone, get a lot of machinery to do the work, let the cider harden by the insistent process of nature, and thus live, not caring whether Mr. Gompers or Mr. Gary has the world by the tail.

This bank is eager and ready to encourage the young men who stick on the farm.

we give our girls occupation, when we get them out of doors, when we give them organized play in the open, there will be fewer morbid women.

Give them something to do that interests them. Get them out into the air. Fill in the waiting years with work and play. Give them some rules of life which will appeal alike to their imaginations and to their instinctive desire for something better. Let them look out as well as up.

Nearst of all the proposed plans to cope with what an increasing number of families are finding to be their problem, the adolescent girl, the Girl Scout movement fulfills all these requirements. It is sane, healthy and normal. It teaches, honesty, purity, vigor and love of country. And it takes the girl in her teens and gives her a live interest in the present instead of the future.

It should have nation-wide support.

OVER EIGHTY ALIENS TO RECEIVE PAPERS

Circuit Clerk Brockway has received an official notice from the government that the ban against all alien enemies has been lifted in Lake county.

Accordingly efforts were made to get in touch with all these men, who number eighty. And all have been located excepting one. Thus the ban has been lifted from 79 of the 80 men and efforts will be made to locate the eightieth so that he can be told that the ban has been lifted. In checking over the 79 men it has been found that all of them are o. k. The majority of them live in Waukegan.
