

The Farmer's Bank Account

With both labor and capital falsely branding the food producer as the high-cost-of-living profiteer, our farmers must fight together under strong leaders if they are to continue to get a living wage for their labor. In our own county this bank will always stand for your prosperity. Nationally—internationally—the strong voice that is speaking for the American farmer today is

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

The farmer is not a profiteer. He has earned his bank account, his credit rating, his home comforts, by saving the world from starvation. But the world is moving fast, and to keep in weekly touch with farm conditions everywhere—to hold what he has won—the farmer should regularly read THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN. The information you will get in the next 52 big issues may make or save for you $100.00 to add to your savings. If you have an account with us, you can instruct us to charge it $1.00 for your year's subscription. If you keep your surplus cash under the old mattress send us $1.00 for THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN. Or, better still, come in and get acquainted—today.

PUBLIC LIBRARY

CHINESE AND JAPANESE STORIES

The story hour will begin at half past three after this, a half hour earlier than formerly. To-morrow we are to have an especial treat. Mrs. Leo will tell Japanese and Chinese fairy stories, and Mr. Ralph Leo will sing Japanese Nursery rhymes. To hear Mrs. Leo is a great treat, always, but with the added attraction of the songs, it will be an especial good time. Remember the change in the time, half past three instead of four o'clock, and come just as soon as you can get here, beginning Friday afternoon, December 5. When you come to the story hour, don't forget to visit the Children's room of the Library, and see the new books and the old favorites.

"The Boys' Book of Chemistry" by Charles Ramsay Clarke is a new book of a kind which boys find tremendously interesting. The science of the future which promises great development seems to be chemistry so it is not surprising that boys should find it unusually interesting. This volume is up to date, simple, and yet adequate. Full directions are given throughout on the practical side as to how to make the simple apparatus necessary, how to rig up a good-enough laboratory and how to conduct advisable experiments.

Books to give for Christmas, are here for you to look over at your leisure, and lists of books which we may not have will be here for you to read. Books about parties and novel entertainments here wait you. Cook books, with new recipes for Christmas guests, and books of costumes for the fancy dress parties are here to help your holiday season be gay, without too great fatigue. Then there are times when you will want to get away by yourself and rest, with a "good book" to read. Such leisure hour stories are here a-plenty just for you. Come to get an armful and make this the pleasantest Christmas vacation you have ever had. You may have only Christmas day "off," perhaps not even that long a holiday, but you can stretch the spirit of gaiety over weeks and weeks during your free time, and make life seem really quite a holiday, if you want to and know how to go about it. Just try and see!

A great number of books and short stories are on the table in the north alcove. They were gathered for supplementary reading by the classes in literature at the high school. They have nearly finished with them, and the books will be released for reading by the general public. In this day of busy lives, the short story is a prime favorite, so an exhibit of famous short stories will appeal to a great many people of varied tastes and interests. The short story is essentially a modern product and the authors are modern writers such as O. Henry, Poe, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Kipling, Stevenson, Mark Twain, J. M. Barrie, Kate Douglas Wiggin and Edith Wharton, and others.

The Public Library is open free to all from nine in the morning until noon, from one in the afternoon until six and from seven until nine every week day, Monday to Saturday. The magazines are always here for your use, that is, when the printers deign to publish them. The minority surely is causing privation to a large number of people.

Richmond's "Red and Black" is not a continuation of her other Red Pepper Burns Stories, but it does relate more fiction of the life of that "peppy" and popular man. Black, of the story, is a new clergyman in the stone church, and his winning of Red from awkward skepticism about Black's power and attitude toward life, to admiring recognition of Black's fine achievement, makes a story worth reading. The community life and its circumstances seem very like those of our own town. The portraits of the fine and lovable woman whom Black loves, and the trifling little flirt who makes so much trouble, are drawn in Mrs. Richmond's characteristic style.

"Sir Harry," considered by Archibald Marshall the best novel that he has written, is certainly better than some, but one can hardly consider him able to outdo himself in some other ways. It is a story of a young man brought up in an ancient castle by his aristocratic grandmother. He meets and falls in love with a young Bohemian artist, much to his grandmother's horror and apprehension. How fate works out salvation for all concerned will interest everyone. All who read Archibald Marshall will be eager to read this new volume, and many who have not discovered this greatest of modern realists, will read it with surprise and pleasure.

"Colas Breugnon" by the author of that famous trilogy, "Jean Christophe," Romain Rolland, is a translation from the French. It is a good book, strong and well written, which will give the reader seven or eight hours of delight. Colas embodies the artistry, humor and courage of France, with the healthy domestic virtues which are as essentially French as some of the more notorious and less desirable characteristics which we sometimes attribute solely to the people of France.

"The Boy Mechanic," which has been issued in huge volumes, now adds a third of equal size, with one thousand and new things for a boy to do. They are alluringly illustrated. Even the most prosaic person would find the pages interesting but to the boys who are experimenting and "making things" it will be fascinating beyond words.

"The Boy Scouts Year Book" for 1919 has also come. It is as large as the previous volumes, and what doesn't it contain! Here are articles on trapping, aeroplane travel, success in business, camping, comic stories, furniture, life in an African Jungle, and such a variety of other subjects. If people who complain that they find it difficult to understand their boys would just try to think and read and talk about (not all) but some of the variety of things of which these same boys think and read and talk, I wonder if they wouldn't soon discover a strong, invisible bridge across the gulf which leads to understanding. I would recommend Boy Scouts books to every mother and father as well as to all boys. If I, myself, could live up to the Scouts' Oath I would consider life well lived. Every organization is best characterized by the literature it issues so to know the Scouts know their literature. The Public Library will help you.

MARGARET RIDLON,
Librarian.
