Uses for Tea Leaves.

Tea leaves are often used to dampen carpets, but they should not be too wet or left lying about long, or the color may come out of the carpet. Tea leaves, however, are valuable for various other purposes. Store them for three or four days, soak them in a pail for about an hour, then strain off the water, which is an excellent wash for all varnished paints and makes them look equal to new.

Wisdom in Quotation.

Bartlett, in his "Familiar Quotations," gives the following: "We read of a certain Roman emperor who built a magnificent palace. In digging the foundation, the workmen discovered a golden sarcophagus ornamented with three circlets, on which were inscribed, 'I have expended; I have given; I have kept; I have possessed; I do possess; I have lost; I am punished. What I formerly expended, I have; what I gave away, I have.'—Gesta Romanorum, Tale XVI."

Gathering Life's Gold.

The gold of life does not lie hidden in mines; it sparkles in tiny sands all along the common path of every day. He only who gathers it bit by bit from daily duties and pleasures and opportunities and friendships will find himself the possessor of the real treasure at last.

Disagreed With Him.

Bert could not eat porridge without feeling distressed. Scolded one day by his sister for speaking rudely to her girl friend, he said: "I just can't help it, sis; she affects me exactly like porridge."

Chicory.

In some parts of Cape Province, South Africa, chicory gives a yield of $250 to $300 per acre, Johannesburg being the chief market.

Keep Up "Good Times."

Keeping interested does not just point toward the serious side of life. It points to recreation—that absolutely necessary constituent of sane, healthy living. Set yourself in the swim of "good times," times that will make you laugh and forget your troubles. There is nothing easier than to slip out of the way of having good times as we get older, and yet the capacity for enjoyment never dies in us, though in our morbid perversity of mental vision we insist to ourselves that it has left us.

Too High to Lend.

Our neighbor, who has a great habit of borrowing, came over one afternoon to borrow some baking powder and I told her I had none. In the course of conversation she mentioned the high price of baking powders, when my brother spoke up: "Look on the grocery bill and see how much they charged me for the can I got this morning."—Exchange.

Ants as Excavators.

Everyone has observed trees that have been hollowed out by ants, and it is apparent that their biting powers are equal to working in the hardest woods. In tunneling, ants are expert, and authentic cases are known of their tunneling under ditches and streams. Indeed, a South American ant is said to have excavated a tunnel under the bed of the Parahya river at a place where it is as broad as the Thames at London bridge.

Member of Committee Directing Nation-Wide Episcopal Campaign

Bishop Charles F. Anderson

Bishop Charles F. Anderson of the Episcopal Diocese of Chicago is chairman of the Joint Commission directing the Episcopal Nation-Wide Campaign. Bishop Anderson was the man selected to head a commission of American clergymen sent to Europe to arouse interest in a world conference of Christian Churches.

Born and ordained to the priesthood in Canada, he became rector of Grace Church, Oak Park—a suburb of Chicago—in 1891. In 1904 he was elected Bishop Coadjutor of Chicago and in the following year succeeded to the Episcopate.

The purpose of the Nation-Wide Campaign is to arouse every member of the church to its responsibilities and opportunities in the present crucial era of reconstruction; to send out 1500 new workers that the church may expand its educational, hospital and social service work at home and abroad. More than one hundred thousand men and women are workers in this tremendous campaign.

TURNING TABLES

By PEARL B. MEYER.

(Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Aunt Jane leaned over an open chest in the garret.

"What's this?" she queried, hauling out some white material.

Beckie, her niece, drew her brows together.

"That's the bureau scarf I started last winter. You didn't like the pattern, so I dropped it."

"H'm," said Aunt Jane. "What's this?" She pulled out something gay with colors.

"Oh, that's the table runner. I got so sick of it I never finished the thing."

"H'm. And this?" Another article was brought to light.

"Goodness me, I started that shirtwaist over a year ago. I'd forgotten all about it."

"Since you were old enough to remember," commenced Aunt Jane, "I have tried to impress on you the value of finishing what you commence."

"Do what you set out to do. This applies to greater things than bureau scarfs and shirtwaists. If you know a thing is right, go ahead with it."

"But, auntie," interrupted Beckie, this time successfully. "How am I to know that I can trust my own judgment?"

"Your conscience will tell you." Beckie, sitting humped over the top of a trunk, pondered deeply.

"Then," she said finally, "if I start to do something that I am sure is right, I should not allow even you—even you, auntie—to swerve me from my purpose?"

"Exactly," returned her aunt, with a pleased nod. "Let's go down now. I want to take a nap."

The nap lengthened into a regular snooze. Aunt Jane was a sound sleeper. She was aroused finally by knocking on the door.

"It's half-past four," called Beckie. Aunt Jane arose hurriedly. Her simple toilet did not take many minutes. Giving a final hurried dab at her tightly twisted pug of gray hair, she moved toward the door. To her astonishment, it was locked. She rattled the knob vigorously.

"Beckie," she called.

"I'm so sorry," spoke a small voice close to the keyhole, "but I'm doing what you told me to do."

"Unlock this door," demanded Aunt Jane sternly.

"I can't."

"What do you mean?"

"Not until you promise me something," said Beckie meekly. "My heart tells me I am right. This is the only way. I've begged and begged and prayed; but you have always said no."

Aunt Jane's hands sank limply to her sides. Beckie had wittingly made her a prisoner.

"Beckie Stowell, let me out this instant."

"I will," came the pleading voice, "if you'll say that I may marry Dwight."

"Never," she raged. "Does that—that whippersnapper know you have done this?"

"No." In breathless haste. "I just asked him to come to supper tonight. I told him I had a real nice surprise for him."

"A real nice surprise," mimicked Aunt Jane; then, after a slight pause: "He will get it."

"Oh, auntie," Beckie's voice was full of tears—"then you can't come out. It's after five now. I've got to go downstairs."

Aunt Jane leaned weakly against the door, her thoughts in such turmoil that she was momentarily stricken dumb. The minister due at six. The table not set. The biscuits—. In an outburst of despairing rage, she beat on the door with her clenched fists.

"Beckie!" she shrieked. "Beckie!"

No reply. From the distant downstairs came little clattering sounds as of dishes being moved.

"It's twenty minutes of six, Aunt Jane."

"My biscuits!" wailed Aunt Jane. "You wicked girl, I shall never forgive you as long as I live."

These bitter words evoked a little sob from the free side of the door. A terrifying idea flashed into Aunt Jane's mind. Did the girl mean she might run away? All her wrath was swept away suddenly in a flood tide of love. She could never think of Beckie other than a child. That was why she would never listen to her talk of marrying.

"It's ten minutes of six," pleaded Beckie. "Oh—I heard the gate click." There was a momentary quaver in her voice. "Aunt Jane—Dwight is so dear." Her voice sank to a breath.

The jangle of the door-bell rang through the house. But to Aunt Jane's heart, Beckie's whispered words sounded louder than did the bell to her ears.

"Beckie," she questioned, "are you sure you're right?"

"Yes," came the answer with a quick intake of breath.

"Then you shall have him, dear."

The key rattled in the lock. The door swung open. Aunt Jane and Beckie stood face to face. At that moment the door-bell jangled most impetuously.

A Good Time to Plant Trees is Right Now

I refer especially to trees running from 4 to 18 inches in diameter. I have hundreds of fine specimen of Elm, Hawthorns, Crab-apples and Linden. They grow in and on the fields of Melody Woods and have been root-pruned so they may transplant well. I will be glad to submit prices on application. Maples, Spruces, etc., may also be planted with the Frostball, Elms and Thorns should be. Call up Phone 85 or write to Box 314 for correct and I consider very low prices.
