Pay-day

From office boy to president there is always a thrill in "Pay-day." Do you know what is in your envelope?

Something more than money! Do you know that you are in it? Ever since last pay-day you have spent your time, energy, strength and thought in order to see another pay-day. All that is left of these last few days is in your envelope-the price of you. How have you planned to use it? Surely you would not deliberately plan to spend it all. These earning days must be saving days, too. Bring part of your money to our Savings Window.

AS THE TWIG IS BENT

The prompt and drastic action on the salaries of teachers taken by the Board of Education of the 108th district should not pass unnoticed. For two years past we have read alarming reports on the scarcity of teachers. We have noted the ever decreasing percentage of young men and young women who are preparing themselves for teaching as a life profession. We have been confronted time and again with the startling fact that a well paid servant in the house receives a larger wage than the highly educated teacher of our children. If a general maid receives fifteen dollars a week for her services and a teacher twenty or even twenty-five, it does not take a skilled mathematician to figure who has more money at the end of the month. In the former case, there are practically no expenses, while in the latter, the teacher is required to pay her board and room, and clothe herself in a manner suitable to the demands of her profession.

Principals of high schools and grammar schools, men teachers, and directors of athletics, all are suffering from the present low purchasing power of the dollar. We in Highland Park who are especially favored in the matter of principals and superintendents of long standing, do not realize the probdem that confronts those who are on the lookout for men, capable in every respect of holding these high positions of trust and responsibility.

The importance of men teachers in the high school admits of no argument, and yet they are expected, often enough, to eke out a living for themselves and family on a salary no greater than that of a woman teacher. Still we want these teachers of our young boys to be manly men, virile, educated, and of a broad outlook on life. But where is our consistency.

The answer is that it can't be done. There must be higher salaries for our teachers. We must put ourselves in their positions, in so far as our imaginations will permit, and after we have succeeded in doing this, to whatsoever small degree, the chances are that we will act, as the Board acted for the Lincoln School and the Ravinia School. There may be other things that we want, and want much more than we want a raise of salaries of the teaching forces. We may need additions to the buildings, or think we do; and these same additions may be a matter of actual necessary utility, do; and these same additions may be a matter of acoual necessary utility, or they may be a matter of spectacle and glory. The point is that it is always easier to spend money on material improvement, than on the spiritual. It is the old dilemma, forever presenting itself: "miters of gold and priests of wood," or the converse.

We are all familiar with the small purchasing power of the dollar today. We are surprised to find that double the salary of three years ago, will not permit the slightest degree of expansion in our living habits. Why hold back in the matter of teachers' salaries? Why attempt to deceive ourselves on a question which, with every parent, should be a matter of first and vital importance?

We are living in an age of modern science, and one which finds its natural expression in an increased regard for material things and material advantage. We are all anxious to point the way to other things for our children, to equip them to enjoy life more abundantly, to cultivate their minds and make them resourceful, but still, we subscribe blindly to a system which yearly makes the high-profession of teaching, with its years of expensive and necessary training, prohibitive. We cling to our ideals for our children. We are ambitious to broaden their outlook. We are firm in the conviction that their mental and spiritual equipment must be of sterner and more lasting stuff than our own. We want our young oaks to strike deep roots that they may be straight, clean-limbed, and towering trees, and yet we turn indifferent faces on that auspicious moment when the and yet we turn indifferent faces on that stupendous moment when the
