NEW BOOKS FOR YOU

Lucas Malet writes "The Tall Villa" as well as she wrote "Sir Richard Calmady" and her former admirers will be pleased to read another intense and fascinating story.

"The Man Who Understood Women" is the provoking title of Leonard Merrick's new book. It provokes women to mirth, and almost everyone to curiosity, so that you just have to read it, to see what strange sort of man he was. The introduction is signed by William J. Locke which is endorsement for any volume of short stories with a much less enticing title. To quote from his introduction: "The field covered by Mr. Merrick in this collection is one which he has made peculiarly his own. Mainly it is the world of the artist, the poet, the journalist, in the years when hopes are high and funds are low, when the soul is full and the stomach empty. It is neither the Bohemia of yesterday's romance nor the Bohemia of degradation, but the sober, clean-living struggling Bohemia of today. Yet he does not belong to the static school who set down the mere greyness of their conditions. He is a poet. . . . Is it a poet who understands women? I wonder."

"The Unseen Host and Other War Plays" by Percival Wilde will draw a host of readers. These little one-act plays were written to be read, but many of them have been put into action, at first for the war benefit performances, and later because of their own intrinsic value. They are very readable. Wilde has the distinction of having more of his plays produced in Little Theatres in 1917 than any other American. This volume was published in 1917, but the demand for it has been so great that it has been difficult to secure copies.

"September" by Frank Swinerton whose last book was "Nocturne" will appeal to many readers to whom the triangle love affairs always appeal. The new twist which he gives his plot is the contrast between the two women: one a mature woman, still beautifully young and the other an undeveloped, strangely sophisticated, fascinating girl. Their friendship, with the struggle between them makes a readable tale.

"A Place in the World" by John

Hastings Turner has an exotic heroine and a drab background of English country suburban life, which make an altogether electric and almost shocking effect. The war provides the searching test for the proving of the butterfly and her specialities in a most remarkable manner as has happened so many times in novels and so seldom in life. But that will not spoil the story for anyone.

"Raymond Robin's Own Story," set to paper by William Hard, gives us another record of Russia, and events of the chaotic time which he spent there. From Lenin and Trotsky he learned their philosophy and believes in it, I understand, to some measure. He supplements his sensational story of the events he witnessed with documents of dramatic value to his account. People who know Mr. Robins in Highland Park and Ravinia will be eager to read this book.

"The Vital Message"—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's latest book on—are the dead really dead—continues the psychic work which he started in his "New Revelation."

How about your fruit trees and your garden? There are books at the public library which will help you to better crops. Now is the time to begin. Seed catalogs are here for you to look over and take home, if you are interested. They are loaned like books. The Garden Magazine has a planting calendar adapted to gardens in this locality which is a grand help and full of new suggestions. Country Life is always an inspiration. Come and look over the magazines. The library is open every day except Sunday from nine to twelve, one to six and from seven to nine in the evening. Magazines are not allowed to circulate so they are always here for your use. You may take home for Sunday all the books you can possibly read in one day. The library is free. Everyone is welcome.

Three large gifts of several volumes, and many smaller gifts have come recently to the public library, and have been greatly appreciated. Those to whom we owe so much are: Mrs. Russell Mott, Mrs. Towner, Mrs. Archibald McBean, Mrs. F. Porter, Mrs. Montgomery, Mrs. Payne, John Rouse, Mr. Kip, Mrs. Onderdonk, Miss Dent, Mrs. Charles Everett, William Rogers, Mrs. Church, Miss McCauley and Woodward Boynton. The demand for books on birds and gardening is tremendous now, and anyone who will share their books by giving them to the Public Library for the use of everyone will be helping where the need of the community is very great. Another need which will be largely increased and for which books will be in demand, is opera and music. Are there books which you have on these subjects which you value but seldom read? Give them to the Public Library so others may use them. They will be here for you, too. Books written by people of our town, and about our town should be preserved in the library of the town, so we are making every effort to let it be known that we are glad to receive them. What does Highland Park mean to outsiders? Homes and gardens and ravines, and the opera and symphony at Ravinia Park. Let us build up collections of books on these subjects in our own town library. You are asked to help.

Margaret Ridlon, Librarian.

The Electric Iron
Its place in the home—

If every time an iron is required, it were necessary to heat it over a fire, a lot of things that need its service would be neglected, don't you think?

But the Electric Iron—

Any of the numerous daily pressing tasks the life of the house develops can be done with it in any room, any time and done quickly—for the iron heats quickly—and done better—because the iron is a better worker than the humble relation which stimulated its invention.

If you are desirous of hearing first hand evidence as to its efficiency, convenience and comfort—how it becomes speedily indispensable—talk with your nearest neighbor who owns an Electric Iron.
