A Good Name

is unquestionably a priceless asset. And, like most things of real worth, it is not gained in a hurry, but is rather the result of hard work and infinite perseverance. The good name we have achieved for ourselves — and in which we take a pardonable pride — we are daily upholding by a still broader and better service.

If you want the best, we want your account.

HOLIDAYS AND HOLY DAYS

Men have kept anniversaries ever since they began to divide time into years and months and days, and learned to appreciate and value the great deeds of heroes, and to cherish the memory of the past.

Savages live from day to day and keep no records. It is only as they advance along the path of civilization that they observe the holidays and Holy days, some of which are so ancient that their beginnings are lost in the mists of antiquity. From the lamentation of the maidens in the temple at Abydos, weeping for Osiris on the anniversary of the death of the sun god, to the celebration of Armistice day, the whole course of modern civilization may be traced. There is a natural inclination to commemorate such facts and festivals and it is a wholesome and commendable custom.

The anniversaries of the family and the home tend strongly to promote family loyalty and affection. The birthdays kept with cakes and candles and gifts, the wedding anniversaries with their appropriate commemorations, these ought all to be encouraged for the good will they increase and the happy memories they preserve.

And then there are public holidays like Independence day and Memorial day. Who can say how large a part the lessons taught by these days have had in building up that patriotism and love of country which led our young men to offer themselves so splendidly when the call came, now almost three years ago. This is the sort of thing that gives us confidence in the stability of our republic and the soundness of our citizenship when we are inclined to doubt them both. In like manner the observance of the birthdays of Washington and Lincoln have kept before our people the lessons which we need to learn from the lives and characters of those great men. It all has a vast and valuable influence upon the formation of the national character and the encouragement of the virtues which are necessary to its permanence.

And so with the great religious anniversaries which come at this season of the year, Good Friday and Easter. None of us can afford to ignore them and we should all be the better for observing them. The time is past when only the Roman Catholic and the Anglican and Lutheran churches kept these days. Now almost all Christian people do so and Easter is the great yearly festival of life and light.

But the observance of these days is not confined to the churches. There are multitudes of men and women who are good citizens and kindly, law-abiding people who belong to no church, and who, it may be, are alienated from all institutional Christianity. Almost without exception, however, these people acknowledge their debt to the founder of Christianity whom they regard as one of humanity's greatest benefactors and one of the world's greatest heroes.

Except for the work which he accomplished and the ideals which he established, civilization might never have emerged from the wreck of the Roman empire, or had it emerged, it might have been as cold and cruel and heartless as the civilization of Greece and Rome which it supplanted. It was only the religion of Christ which preserved the traditions of human fellowship and kept the lamp of learning alight during that dark time.

To Him in whose memory these holy days are sacred is due every institution of charity and mercy and benevolence which we enjoy today, every abatement of the ancient cruelties, and in addition to all this the very principles of democracy and civil liberty which are inseparable from the right understanding of the Christian religion and are products of it.

LIBRARY WORK IN HIGHLAND PARK

One of the most important features of any community is its library. It is more than important. It is essential for "man can not live by bread alone." It is for this reason perhaps that we accept the library like all other essentials of life, water and fresh air, little realizing their importance unless, perchance, they happen to be withdrawn.

The present modern library on Laurel Avenue is the outgrowth of a long history of venture and struggle. The nucleus of this library had its origin twenty-five years ago in the back of what was the old City Hall building, with Mrs. Jennings as librarian. At that time Dr. Wolcott was on the Board and he has worked steadily and faithfully on that same board throughout the years that have passed. The next home of the Library was in the building purchased from the Elm Place School on Sheridan Road, formerly a part of the Elm Place School, and now used by the Masonic Lodge, the Royal Arcanum, Modern Woodmen, and other secret organizations. The library sold this building to the Young Men's Club and with the proceeds from the sale was able to add six thousand dollars to the twelve thousand donated by Mr. Carnegie, and thus cover the entire expense of the new building.

The result is, the excellent modern library which we are enjoying today. The present librarian, Margaret Ridlon, has done much to bring the library into closer relation to the town, and the town into a more intimate knowledge of the library. Her weekly reports of books on hand, her reviews, her painstaking investigation into the merits of books, her story hour once a week for the children, have gone a long way toward bringing the citizens into closer contact with her work and teaching them how to make more intelligent use of a library. During last month the books in circulation were almost double that of the February before. The work of the library is steadily increasing and indications are now that they will be forced before long to acquire new quarters for their expansion.

The library at Deerfield-Shields sprang into existence in a manner similar to the Public Library. Again Dr. Wolcott put his hand to this organization project. Ten years ago the High School had no special library, and no special librarian, the teachers and members of the Senior-class taking charge of the work by turns. After five years the library at Deerfield-Shields was a recognized and established success, and it was one of the first high school libraries to be organized along modern lines. For the past five years it has had its regular librarian, and the work, going forward at our high school library, has now become a marked feature of advanced educational methods.

HIGHWOOD RESIDENT DIED THIS MORNING

Mr. Frank O. Sheridan, an old resident of Highwood, died this morning at the Augustana hospital where he has been for the past two weeks suffering from blood pressure. As arrangements for the funeral have not been made no further notice can be given at this time. Full particulars will be published next week.

ELM PLACE SCHOOL

Mr. W. L. Finley of Portland, Ore., a noted field naturalist and photographer of wild life, gave two lectures in the Elm Place auditorium Tuesday afternoon and a third lecture in the evening. The afternoon audiences were school pupils, the entire enrollment of Elm Place and nearly every pupil from three schools of District 108, about 900 in all, attending. The evening audience of more than 300 adults was as enthusiastic as the afternoon audiences had been. It was agreed that the lecture was the finest of its kind that has ever been given here. Probably no one has been quite so successful in winning the cooperation of birds and other wild animals in getting up motion pictures of wild life as has Mr. Finley. The sympathetic insight of the naturalist and the skill of the photographer afford glimpses of wild life that cannot fail to influence profoundly the attitude towards wild life of all who witness the portrayal. The Elm Place pupils are congratulating themselves upon the financial success of the undertaking. The receipts exceeded $265.00, of which nearly $100 was profits.
