HIGHLAND PARK TRUST & SAVINGS BANK. JOHN A. BUNNELL, JOHN OLIVER, HARRY PAUL.

The Highland Park Press

THE COMMUNITY SHOP

One of the most successful efforts in cooperation ever undertaken in any small community and one which is attracting favorable attention far and wide, is the Highland Park Community Shop, which was begun about a year ago by a group of public spirited women known as the Committee of Sixty, and which has had a career of surprising and increasing success.

The object of the venture is to utilize the time and efforts of capable women, and the odds and ends of usable articles which they can bring together, in order to supply the needs of people to whom the practice of economy is imperative, and to provide money for the support of worthy and charitable enterprises.

The thing has prospered amazingly under the very intelligent management of its projectors, and not the least of its successes has been in the line of the development of the community spirit through the efforts of the women who have made that success possible.

The shop makes no profits for its directors and workers as their services are freely given, but it sets aside the sum of $200 monthly for the support of the Highland Park Community Service and $50 monthly to each of the following institutions: Arden Shore, The Highland Park Hospital, the Highland Park Y. W. C. A., the Highwood Patriotic League and the Chicago Lighthouse, an institution for the training of the blind.

In addition to these grants it contributes to other worthy causes as its directors may determine.

The shop in no way comes into competition with the regular business enterprises of our merchants but is wholly a benevolent and public spirited undertaking which ought to have the hearty support of every citizen.

DOMESTIC SERVICE

When two women meet on the street today and stop to talk, the odds are two to one that the subject of their conversation is either the weather or the problems of domestic service.

Our spring weather is notoriously bad and worse this year than usual, but no amount of discussion or complaint can change it for the better, so that except as an outlet for suppressed emotion, talk about it is useless.

Domestic service, too, is in a bad way from the standpoint of the housewife.

Not so long ago plenty of women were willing to cook and do housework for moderate wages, now the wages seem excessive, having doubled and trebled since the war began and there are not enough women at any price to take the jobs that are offered.

The truth is that domestic service with its long hours and its suggestion of social inferiority is distinctly unpopular, not only so, but women can get higher pay and more attractive places in shops, offices and factories. The consequence is that housewives have to do their own work or give up housekeeping, and they do not like it. Only the wealthy can keep up their domestic establishments on a pre-war basis and even they have their troubles.

There are several ways in which the problem might be solved. One is to employ domestic help on an hourly rather than a weekly basis, women coming to the home at definite hours at a stated price per hour. If a supply of competent workers were available, this would tend to develop specialists in the various branches of domestic service who would go from house to house plying their vocations. There are possibilities to such a scheme.

Cooperative domestic centers from which prepared meals might be sent to the various houses of the cooperating group, is a plan which has been tried in a small way and appears to work out well. There is no reason why such centers under competent management might not supply such other help as the housekeepers require.

Then there is the increasing recourse to the hotel and the apartment house which threatens the very existence of the American home as we knew it a generation ago.

In any case the old fashioned way of living seems doomed to extinction unless there is a change for the better in the present day conditions of domestic service.

Y. W. C. A. PAGEANT FINANCIAL SUCCESS

"The Maiden Over the Wall" Given to a Packed House Last Friday Night

The pageant, "The Maiden Over the Wall," was given Friday night at the Elm Place auditorium to a packed house, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The Junior dancing classes were cunning as could be and were given with childlike simplicity that is such an attraction. The fairy dance was especially popular, the twinkle, twinkle, the Dutch dance, the Tarantelle and brownies following as close seconds.

The omnipresent bewitching little elves in their quaint green costumes added a note of glee to the whole entertainment. The Rintintinette by Irene Stevens and Marjorie Bowden, the shadow dance by Mae Hesler, and the dance of the sea nymphs by Frances Borchardt, Eloise Brown, Alice Flint, Irene Fisher, Geraldine Crawford, Mae Hesler, Marjorie Bowden and Irene Stevens deserve credit, and Irene Stevens deserves special comment both on account of the attractive costuming and the artistic work done in the dances.

In "The Maiden Over the Wall," Miss Mildred Hesler made an enchanting princess and looked the part to perfection—while Miss Esther Krueger scored a hit as the adventurous American rescuer.

Geraldine Crawford was a sprightly elfish leader of the elves in all their mischief making, followed by Alice Reid as Moro, the sergeant.

The humorous character of the evening was the grotesque dragon who ate people alive and was ably portrayed by Miss Belva Whyman, who looked fierce enough to do that very thing. The elf song by Lois Larson, the violin solo by Dora Krueger, and the beautiful fountain dance by Hilda Larson were greatly enjoyed by all.

The dances were given under the direction of Mrs. Humphrey and Miss Richardson, who have had charge of the Y. W. C. A. dancing classes the past year.

The decorations for the entertainment were especially beautiful as the back ground was made entirely of groups of multicolored holly hocks, giving a festive appearance to the whole atmosphere.

ELM PLACE SCHOOL

The game between Lake Forest and Elm Place last Friday afternoon was played in Highland Park, due to a change in plans. The final score was 3-3.

In the eighth inning, with two out, (the score being 7 to 4 in Lake Forest's favor), a spectator threw a bat. The umpire declared the batter out. As the umpire, a Lake Forest coach, had made several unfair decisions the Elm Place team declared they would not play unless the umpire was changed. After much discussion a 1920 rule book was produced by an onlooker which proved that "if a game is terminated before the agreed time the score shall be that of the last of the fifth inning." This was 3-3.
