PUBLIC LIBRARY

BETTER CITIZENSHIP

"Good Books Make Good Citizens"—this is the firm conviction of the American librarians who are back of the "books for everybody" movement. To be a good citizen one needs to be grounded in the ideals of American democracy and well informed on current and political affairs. That requires a continuing education which will apply not only to new Americans but to all Americans. Libraries can provide this continuing education.

There are approximately 15,000,000 new Americans in the United States and more than 6,000,000 of this number cannot read or speak the language of America. Millions of American-born do not come in contact with good books. Many national efforts have been made the last few months to solve the social and industrial problems that are agitating the country, but none of them has taken into consideration that powerful agency for self-education—the library. Many libraries have demonstrated the effectiveness of this important work.

PASSAVANT MEMORIAL HOSPITAL TRAINING SCHOOL

The Passavant Memorial Hospital Training School for Nurses offers to young women a thorough training in the art of nursing. It is accredited by the State Department of Education and Registration and is affiliated with the Illinois Training School for Nurses.

The Passavant Memorial Hospital is located near the business center of Chicago, convenient to both elevated and surface car lines, and within walking distance of Lake Michigan and Lincoln park. The school is so situated that pupils may avail themselves of some of the opportunities for education offered in a city like Chicago, in art, music, and historical interests. A special effort is made to impress upon the pupils the desirability of cultivating such intellectual interest, so that their three years in Chicago will make not only good nurses, but broader and more cultured women.
