INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE

There is now in session at the Hague a Commission for a Permanent Court of Justice under the League of Nations, and Elihu Root and James Brown Scott, formerly of our State department and now head of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, are prominently identified with the plans which are now approaching completion.

It is probable that the quiet work of this commission of which so little has been written, is of greater importance and means more for the future peace and welfare of the world than anything that has been undertaken or discussed since the armistice was signed. The personnel of the commission is such that its recommendations will command instant respect and universal confidence.

The weakness of the former Hague tribunal was that its authority was not generally recognized and could not be enforced, and that its decisions were almost wholly academic, so that no compulsion could be brought to bear upon any nation to accept its decisions.

With the birth of the League of Nations a new world order established which is going to assume greater dominance over the affairs of nations as time goes on. In the Council of the League the great powers only are represented, but in the Assembly each of the smaller states has a seat and a vote. Thus in the Council Great Britain and the United States have each one vote, while in the Assembly each of the great commonwealths of the British Empire is represented, as is only right and fair. This works no hardship to the members of the Council since its decisions overrule those of the larger and subordinate Assembly.

Mr. Root's plan for the selection of judges for the international court provides that they shall be appointed by the concurrent choice of these two great representative bodies, no jurist being appointed who is not approved by both Council and Assembly of the League. This plan has been adopted and it will give to the court such impartiality and power that no state will dare to set aside the decisions of such a body of jurists and seek the costly and hazardous arbitrament of battle, such at least is our reasonable hope.

This is the greatest step toward peace and international order that has ever been taken by civilized nations, and it leads us to hope that the time is not far distant when warfare as a means of settling international disputes will be as completely superseded as has been the duello in the settlement of personal quarrels. There is no reason why law should not apply to nations as well as to individuals, and the League of Nations provides us with the international court and the international police force which may be used to enforce its decrees.

The League of Nations with such amendments and safeguards as may be shown to be needed, and this permanent Court of International Justice under the protection and authority of the League, give promise of greater future good than any other agreements ever entered into by modern states and peoples.

APPRECIATION

Ex-Secretary Franklin Lane speaking at Williams college not long ago, said that while we have more clubs, lodges, unions and fellowships than any other people on earth, there is one we lack and need more than any other: a League of Appreciation.

"When a man does a fine thing in public life we should let him know that we appreciate it. The forces of malevolence, the destructive forces, have their agencies constantly at work, they insinuate and intimidate. Why should not the constructive forces be equally alert and assert themselves in the promotion of honesty and courage in our public men? They need it, these public men, for we have not yet developed people who can live and grow outside the sunshine of public approval."

These words are worth remembering. There are plenty of people ready to blame but few to praise and encourage. If you like what a man is doing tell him so. Let us join the society of encouragers.

PRESS RECEIVES LETTER FROM LOCAL RESIDENT

Hits at Women Cigarette Fiends Who Set Bad Example for the Children

The following story was handed in to this office by a resident of Highland Park:

"Last night a well dressed young man alighted from the eight o'clock Chicago train and was joyously met by two bright happy little girls.

I followed the three commenting to myself on the real joy and happiness they were displaying. In my interest I followed their movements to a modest automobile standing just south of the station. The well dressed young man broke suddenly away from the two children and half jumped into the machine in his anxiety to greet a well dressed young woman. This, to me, was a perfect family rejoicing. Soon the automobile door slammed shut and the party was ready for home.

Here to my utter amazement a thing happened that caused the writing of this short article:

The well dressed young woman, apparently a wife and mother of two little girls, pulled long and hard at a lighted cigarette. For the moment I was stunned. I could hardly believe my eyes. Here in Highland Park, a community where the highest and best interest of children and the home are upheld and defended—here in the public gaze—a well dressed

A Small Garden Made Beautiful

WE not only develop the larger country estates along the North Shore, but also create small lovely gardens, filled with fragrance, color and shrubs, that attract and feed our song birds. The American flower garden "has come to the fore" and there is nothing lovelier.

Teehouses, Ravine Tables, Lily Ponds, Garden Accessories, like the Gazing Globe, Sun-bath and Seats tend to enhance the beauty of a garden. Hot and Cold Bulbs are as welcome as the bluebirds in early spring. We WHOLESALE them.

Our office is as ever at your service, be it for Forestry Work, Tree Surgery, the planning and designing of your home grounds and the actual planting in the early fall.

Kindly call up Highland Park 64 and we will estimate your wants.

Respectfully,
