JAMES M. COX

It is the great moral issue of the day.
It is a concerted effort of the nations of the world to prevent future wars.

It has been signed by thirty-nine nations and is a going concern.

The League of Nations today is filing treaties, limiting armaments, preventing the spread of disease and will settle the warlike dispute between Finland and Sweden over the Aland Islands.

No treaty that the President is authorized by the Constitution of the United States to make or the Senate to ratify can abrogate that Constitution. The council of the League of Nations can only recommend certain action to Congress and Congress of the United States alone has the power to declare war.

The United States, Turkey, Russia, Mexico and Germany are the only countries that have not joined the League of Nations.

Cox and Roosevelt stand squarely for this great moral issue.
