

Harding and Coolidge

and

America First

The Constitution of United States of America wisely provides that the treaty making powers be vested in the President and the Senate. A treaty is a delicate instrument which can only be constructed and correctly interpreted by the highest legal talent, deliberating coolly and calmly. Therefore it is impossible in the heat of a political campaign, with its turmoil and strife, to render a so-called solemn referendum on so momentous an issue.

The leaders of the Democratic Party would sidetrack your attention from your domestic problems, the solution of which is so vital to your interests. They overlook the seriousness of the High Cost of Living; the importance of an adequate Merchant Marine; the necessity of a proper solution of the Immigration Problem; the crying need for better transportation; the value of an equitable adjustment between Labor and Capital; the importance of a Budget System; the demand for National Economy. Your future prosperity and peace of mind depends on a speedy and unbiased solution of the above problems, which can only be guaranteed by a return from a one man control to a constitutional government.

YOUR NEEDS DEMAND A CHANGE

There is not a voter and certainly not a taxpayer who cannot see, if he looks back, these things:

1. Billions lost because of unpreparedness for war.
2. Billions lost because of unpreparedness for peace.
3. Bungling of the League of Nations Idea in Paris.

4. A government that not only showed itself unfitted to run the business of the country, but a country that could not run its own business.

Let us be done with Wilson's policies.

Let us be done with Wilson's personality.

Let us be done with autocracy, egotism, exclusiveness and peevishness.

Let us be done with Wilson's war powers.

Let us be done with an invasion of Senatorial powers.

Let us be done with extravagance.

Let us be done with absurd income tax laws.

Let us return to a sane and competent executive management as prescribed in the Constitution.

The Republican party will restore:

1. Government by representation.
2. Government by able men.
3. Government that consults the people.
4. Government with a business organization.
5. Government that sets a high standard of honor for American business, but stops pulling American business toward the precipice.

Senator Harding will seek the strongest possible men for his cabinet and the other important places he may be called upon to fill. He knows enough to know that he cannot know everything and will welcome advice and counsel and hearken to it with judgment.

Your interest as a patriot, your interest as a voter, your interest as a citizen, your interest in the future of your country, combine to require the return to Republican principles.
