ANTI-VACCINATIONISTS BACKED BY PHYSICIANS

RIGHTS MUST BE OBSERVED

Prominent Chicago Health Expert Expresses Ideas Held by Many Local Residents

That it is all right for a person to be vaccinated if he so desires, but the person who opposes vaccination has an equal right and no effort should be made to compel him to vaccinate, is the attitude that has been taken by the board of education of Waukegan, and many people of this and other cities along the north shore. Along this line it is interesting to note that Dr. William Brady, a reputable physician who conducts a medical department in the Chicago Daily News in which he answers queries of the public, takes the same view. The following question and the answer to it by Dr. Brady appeared in the News:

Why Be Vaccinated?

"If inoculation with the virus of cowpox (vaccination) is a real preventative of smallpox, why are not the health authorities more stringent about vaccinating every seven years, as I understand after that period the subject is again susceptible. A.S.F."

The seven year notion is about as sensible as the conception of "seven year itch," or the superstition that broken bones "knit" on the seventh or ninth or some other mystic day or the tradition that a young mother should remain in bed until or not remain in bed after the ninth day, or the popular fallacy that a fever turns or a crisis comes on the ninth or twenty-first day.

Inoculation with the virus of cowpox is an unscientific, always risky procedure, because we do not know what the virus is or what it contains. Unquestionably accidental infection in connection with it has brought about some tragic deaths. Unquestionably it subjects the child to a certain risk. Notwithstanding all this, I like to keep myself, my children and all who are dear to me well vaccinated, because I believe in this very unscientific protection.

If the next door neighbors do not believe in it, I cannot blame them. If they do not wish to submit to vaccination I am bound to admit that they act within their rights. It would be departing far from the principles of fairness and justice for me to insist or for any citizen or legally constituted authority to insist on vaccinating my neighbor's children against his wishes.

But unbelieving neighbor has still another grievance. Since he refuses to be vaccinated or to have his children vaccinated, some health departments insist that he and his children shall be strictly quarantined or isolated in time of smallpox epidemic or fear of such epidemic. They assume this position on the ground that the unbeliever might otherwise spread smallpox infection through the community when coming down with the disease.

I formerly agreed with that view. It seemed to me that the unbeliever should not be permitted to endanger the well being of other persons. But I no longer see it in that light.

If cowpox inoculation (vaccination) is the preventative we believe it to be, let us offer it without fee to everybody who desires to be protected. Then let us discard the isolation or quarantine of smallpox cases. That is no more important than the isolation of scarlet fever or whooping cough today. Let us give the unbeliever carte blanche to go and come as he chooses. All of us who believe and are vaccinated have nothing to fear from him; all of those who do not believe and are not protected are surely entitled to take the risk involved.

It is inconsistent to oppose the anti-vaccinationist. Give him all the rope he wants. Why should we who are protected worry?
