VALUE OF COMMUNITY MUSICALS EXPLAINED

BY MR. GEORGE R. JONES

The Possibilities for the Organization of a Chorus and An Orchestra Age
Very Good

Among the activities of a Community Center, music has a very important part to perform. For music is universally recognized as one of the most necessary requisites in the collective expression of any aim or ideal, whether it be to win a war or to get the best out of community life.

Of course a community does not become filled with enthusiasm for good music all at once. On the contrary, it is a slow and gradual process—full of uphill work—as witness the years of musical development in Cincinnati and Chicago. There is no talisman to change us in that respect over night. Nor should we want to shirk the splendid experience that comes with the study of music of any President. Eliot once said "that the reading of music at sight brought out more faculties of the mind simultaneously than any other thing he knew."
And it is with this spirit of treating music as its own reward that we must go through the drilling, rehearsing, individual lessons, performances, etc., which are the necessary pre-requisites to a musical community. Only one other factor is needed and that is an energizing force behind it all—a role which we should equip our Community Center to play.

In a community way we are just beginning to find out what singing holds for us. I mean the trained, rehearsed singing of good music in crowds, not the impromptu singing that we have had so much of, though that, too, in a little different setting, has its proper place. Both should be enthusiastically taken in hand at the Center. I believe singing of special types of music in groups could be made, under good direction, to repay all who take part. Then would follow some of the finer works for cho-uses to be performed periodically in public. Even a good instrumental orchestra is not out of the question in Highland Park to give the lighter forms of the best orchestral music.

When people doing serious work in groups have been made acquainted with the real music of the masters they inevitably want to hear better music. The coming of this demand is the sign that the work is succeeding and the demand should be met. There ought to be plenty of opportunity for local talent to perform, but the main thing is to keep the standard high by securing the best professional talent for periodical concerts. The Student Orchestra under Mr. Stock might give a yearly concert here, or even the Symphony Orchestra itself. The Flonzaley Quartette should make one of their one-night stands here. And why not bring to Highland Park occasional some of the great artists, Bauer, Spalding, Casals, Clausen?
I speak of a musical community as though it were definitely capable of fulfillment. In fact, the one can be worked out as well as the other.
The appreciation of any art is a cultivated taste and the appreciation of music can be imparted to every man, woman and child in Highland Park.
The question is, is it worth the effort to do this? I answer, is not the Community Center itself a sign that America is beginning to feel that life should contain something more than the mad rush for money, and that it is a part of our new-found community conscience to do whatever we can to promote the things that will really make it worth the living.

MR. GEORGE R. JONES.
