

You Can Write a Book

When someone asked Mark Twain which was his favorite of all the books he had written it took him just about half a second to answer, "My Bank Book."

Everyone can write a book—not like Huck Finn, perhaps — but on the style of Mark Twain's favorite, the true story of one who keeps his money matters in good order and does not forget Tomorrow in the excitement of Today.

Your bank book tells your story. Perhaps our officers can help you make it good reading.

MEMORIAL TREES

We heartily approve the suggestion recently made that trees be planted along our highways to commemorate our young men, who during the great war took up arms in support of the cause of liberty. No more beautiful and appropriate memorials could be found to keep their memory green, memorials which would carry on to posterity our grateful appreciation of their fine spirit and splendid courage.

At the beginning of such an avenue there might be set up a tablet of enduring bronze recording the names of those so honored, each district commemorating its own heroes.

We planted such a tree here in Highland Park a year or so ago and dedicated it with appropriate ceremonies, but it was only one, whereas there ought to be many, and even at that, our lone memorial tree remains unmarked and there is danger lest the occasion of its planting be forgotten and its purpose lost sight of.

The planting of memorial trees is an ancient custom which has commended itself to the men of every generation. Every college campus has its class trees and almost every distinguished visitor to our shores plants a memorial tree at some one of our national shrines.

It is said that after the Peninsular War the Duke of Wellington caused five hundred elms to be set out along the road from Grenada to the Alhambra and this avenue is now one of the most beautiful in Europe.

Every visitor to Japan remembers the splendid avenue of cryptomerias, twenty-seven miles long leading from Utsunomia to the shrines of the Shoguns at Nikko. It is one of the great sights of Japan, and it was planted by a nobleman who was too poor to embellish the temples with gold and lacquer, but who wanted to make a worthy offering to the great shrine. His gift remains while the gifts of others are forgotten.

What is so beautiful as a tree with its roots deep planted in the earth and its leafy crest reaching up toward heaven? And what so beneficent, with its yearly gifts of flowers and fruit and foliage and its benediction of shade?

As Joyce Kilmer wrote,

"I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast.
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray.
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree."

Surely, a grove of beautiful trees ought to be planted about the spot in France where Joyce Kilmer fell.

THE TYRANNY OF FASHION

Who is it that sets the fashions in clothes? And why is it that we are such slaves to this mysterious arbiter?

It would be shocking for a man to wear a white tie with a dinner jacket or a black one with evening dress, but for a woman to appear in public in a gown with puffed sleeves or a skirt that swept the ground would be monstrous. But why it should be so is a question which only a philosopher can answer.

There is much outcry today against the indelicacy of the prevailing fashions, but the indelicacy consists in half disclosed charms and in daring disregard of time worn conventions.

There is a modesty like that of the Venus of Milo which can go hand in hand with nudity, but not with those garments which suggest without revealing. But what after all, do we mean by modesty?

We hazard a guess that modern feminine fashions reflect the athletic tendencies of the modern young woman and her new found freedom, it is a return to the Greek mode of Atalanta.

In spite of rouge and powder, bobbed hair and bare knees she may be as sound at heart and as wholesome as her grandmother.

"Whose feet beneath her petticoat
Like little mice stole in and out,
As if they feared the light."

It may be so, and yet 'tis a pity.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all those who sent flowers, furnished automobiles, offered their services and in many ways expressed their sympathy to us in our late bereavement.

Mrs. Edna Doose, His Mother and Father.

No one has ever computed how much time is lost through failure to meet appointments promptly, but it runs into millions of hours.

Some salesmen need lessons in voice culture more than they do on the "proper approach" for a harsh voice ruins many a persuasive thought.
