RAVINIA MAN TO PAINT IN EUROPE

Frank Peyraud Goes Abroad to Put Old World Scenes On Canvas

For forty-two years Frank Peyraud has been putting the great American landscape upon canvas. The deserts of Arizona, the everglades of Florida, the canyons and cornfields of the west, and plains and mountains of the middle west, the hills and valleys of the east have come under his brush.

Schools of modernists flourished and died, new techniques captured the fancy of artists and collapsed, but Peyraud's landscapes continued to multiply without interruption until to the critics of the country the name Peyraud became synonymous with the American scene. Word of the fact that the celebrated painter is to devote the next period of his life to reproducing the landscapes of France and Switzerland has caused a stir, therefore, among the art gallery visitors of the country.

"My father has always dreamed of going back to his birthplace near Bulle, Switzerland," said Albert Peyraud, his son. "He has spent his life painting everything in America but always remembering the mountains of his boyhood. Before he left he told me that he was going to change his work entirely and that he would paint the French scene and the Swiss Alps in such a way as to make them unmistakably of the old world."

Awaiting the result of Peyraud's metamorphosis in Chicago is his wife, Elizabeth Krysher Peyraud, herself a portrait painter of note. Mrs. Peyraud, who comes from Carbondale, Ill. and whose qualities as a painter and writer have attracted wide attention, is of the opinion that her husband's work will experience a new impetus by his change of scene.

In art circles the fact that Peyraud is "doing Europe" is regarded as one of the strangest developments in the city's art work.

"We wonder," said one artist familiar with the painter's canvases "how Peyraud is going to adjust himself to European landscape after forty years or more of American scenes. His eyes, more than those of any other painter in this country, have been able to grasp the vastness and spirit of the national landscape. The canvases that he brings back with him will have not only an artistic but a high psychological value."

The Peyraud's home is in Ravinia. According to his son, the painter expects to remain abroad two years.—Chicago Daily News.

THEY WILL DO IT

A safety director tells this one apropos the difficulty of teaching some people to observe the rudimentary principles of "safety first."

Wash White got a job in a saw-mill. The boss put him in charge of a buzz saw, showed him how the saw worked, warned him of its dangers, and then went away. Wash was fascinated by the shining, whirling saw. But was it, truly, as sharp and terrible as the boss had said? To test it he touched it gently with his finger. "Baw" and the finger was no more. As Wash was ruefully tying up his hand in his bandana the boss came back. "Hullo there, Washington. What's the matter?" "Buzz saw done cut off my finger, sah." "How the dickens did that happen?" "Ah dunno," said Wash. "Ah just touched de darn contraption like this an'—Fo' de lands sake, der's amudder gone!—The North Shore Bulletin.
