NOME: A CITY THAT HIBERNATES

Nome, Alaska, in recent years has been a city that dwindles in winter to a population of but a few hundred, and spring has brought a lessening return of residents. Thus this remote mining camp, after a meteoric career and growth into a city, gradually is resuming the status of a town.

Situated on the bleak north coast of the icy storm-swept Bering sea, close to the Arctic circle, Nome is frozen in and snowed in for about seven months of the year. Its chief industry, placer gold mining, depends upon the use of running water, therefore the activities must stop when the water congeals. Rather than spend the long winter in the extreme cold, waiting for the return of mild weather, a large part of the population of Nome has always returned to the States in the fall, making the journey back to the north in June, when navigation opens.

The over-night creature of an unusual gold discovery, the town grew up on a site that probably could not have been worse fitted for a community of human habitation. It is open to the full sweep of the violent storms and the heavy waves that often beat in from the sea. It has a relatively narrow beach and immediately within is a strip of tundra, frozen solid in winter, but a sea of mud during the open season. In this morass the town grew up. In the early days men and animals floundered through streets that were knee-deep in mud. Later the principal thoroughfares were boarded over. Each summer foolhardy newcomers built structures on the beach only to have them wholly destroyed by the blasts of September when, almost without warning, huge waves swept to the edge of the tundra and often into the town itself.

Gold was first discovered near Nome in 1898, in one of the numerous creeks that rise in the hills back of the town and cross the tundra to the sea. This discovery was widely heralded through Alaska and the western states. Thousands flocked to the neighborhood in the summer of 1899 and the town was born. That season the remarkable discovery was made that the sand of the beach at the edge of the town was rich in gold, and thousands of prospectors with crude equipment took out respectable fortunes. The beach could not be filed upon, but anyone was permitted to dig there. This unique feature of the Nome gold fields drew more than 20,000 people to the region the following summer, and the town grew into a thriving city. Placer miners burrowed into the sand like moles for 30 miles or more up and down the beach.

Nome took its name from Cape Nome nearby, which was named as the result of a misunderstanding. It means nothing unless it can be construed to signify "the nameless." It was discovered in the examination of an early chart that when the physical features of northwestern Alaska were named one cape had been overlooked. The pencilled query "name?" was made beside it. A copyist translated the scrawled question as "Nome," and the name has stuck.

Electric Irrigation.

Wholesale generation and distribution of electric current for the special purpose of irrigation, as it is generated and distributed elsewhere for light and power, is an unusual and interesting project recently undertaken in Queensland, Australia, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The method employed is to sink a large well on each holding of land and install an electrically driven pump. There are in excess of 100 of these well pumps and some 13 miles of transmission lines radiate from the central station to supply them.

For the wells, precast re-enforced concrete cylinders, 5 to 7 feet in diameter, 8 feet long, and weighing 2 1/2 to 3 tons, are lowered from 16 to 40 feet to the water-bearing stratum.

BOUTS WERE POPULAR AT FORT SHERIDAN

Ex-Champion of Hawaii Knocked Out by Fredericks in Three Rounds

Boxing was met with popular applause at Fort Sheridan last Thursday evening, and many good fights were staged; especially the Fredericks-Flann bout, in which the latter made an unsuccessful but game comeback in the ring. It was apparent that Flann, who was the former welterweight champion of Hawaii, and who had beaten some of the best in the country drives of the young-ster Fredericks, who finished the fight in the 3rd round of a scheduled 6 round bout with a right cross over the heart assisted by a left feint to the jaw. It was a terrible blow and it caused the third and last knockdown, leaving no doubt that the game and one time unbeatable Flann was knocked cold and out. The men weighed 148 lbs.

Sgt. Earl McCauley meted out a terrible lacing to Pvt. Frank Marsilio, which caused the latter to retire in the third round of a scheduled 4 round bout. They went in at 135 lbs.

Corporal Jack Stein, who has put up many good fights along the north shore, fought a fast 4 round draw with Pvt. Prieskop. It was an interesting battle, Stein leading in the first two rounds and displaying the famous Dempsey, one-two punch which dropped Prieskop in the 2nd round. Stein then weakened and Prieskop took the lead, evening up matters. It was later learned that too much pepper was placed in the beef tea that Stein drank, and which fairly choked him. They will fight again in a return match, some time in February, for the championship of Fort Sheridan. They both fought at 120 lbs.

Pvt. Leslie Wilbane outpointed Pvt. Garvin Garrison in 4 rounds at 148 lbs. Kilbane displayed a style of cleverness, speed, and clean fighting, which persuaded the judges to give him the decision. Kilbane was suggested as the next opponent for Fredericks.

Pvt. Joe Frisco was given the decision over Pvt. Al Johnson in the third round of a scheduled 4 round bout, when the latter was too much of a slugger for Frisco to handle for Johnson. Pvt. Gus George, pride of the 14th Cavalry, won the 15 minute fall wrestling match over Al Chapple, "street car champion of Chicago."

The Perry 10-year-old youngsters had their second meeting and fought a 3-round draw, which still caused the spiderweight championship to remain in dispute.

In all, it was a good show and a real treat for the fight fans. Championship matches will be held at the Fort some time in February, and several merry battles are promised.

The aim of education according to many people, is to teach the rising generation how to get rich without doing any work.

PACKAGES WERE MAILED EARLIER THAN USUAL

Christmas Rush at Post Office Evenly Distributed Over Several Days

"The public is to be congratulated," said Postmaster William M. Dooley yesterday afternoon "Upon the way in which the mailing of Christmas packages was carried on." Instead of waiting until the very last minute this year, many profited by previous experience and mailed their packages early. The Christmas rush was evenly divided among the last few days, and the final jam Christmas eve was not so great as in other years. Every piece of mail was delivered the day it was received. No packages were held over from one day to the next. The post office employees are especially thankful for the many kind remembrances Christmas day.

WOMAN'S CLUB PLAN THREE UNUSUAL EVENTS

ble Elmendorf definitely out of the work, those who have heard Mr. Macpherson predict he is to step into the place made by the retirement of Mr. Elmendorf.

As the name indicates, Mr. Macpherson is of Scotch descent. He appears in Scotch costume and shows pictures taken during the past summer in the British Isles, and on the Continent. He has had many conferences with men in high official life abroad, and gives many original ideas of his impressions of those over there and of how they regard us. His pictures are beautiful, his lecture highly entertaining, sparkling as it does with the wit and humor of the "canny Scot."

These evenings are presented by the Highland Park Woman's club at a price to make them possible for all. The idea is not just to make money, but mainly to give to Highland Park something that the people of our city want, at a price much less than it can be obtained for any other place and at no inconvenience or waste of time in the matter of travel, no expense in carfare — in other words bringing Chicago's lecture and concert into our own home town.

Tickets may be obtained at the box office of the theatre, or at Gsell's drug store or Pease's drug store in Highland Park. Also from any member of the finance committee of the Highland Park Woman's Club.
