NEED FOR AN AUDITORIUM

At an election a week from Saturday voters in School District 107 will be called upon to decide whether or not an additional building shall be constructed on the Elm Place site. The board has made a careful and wise analysis of the situation and it seems best to sustain their program. Constructing a new building at Elm Place will not prove an obstruction to the erection of another building elsewhere later on, according to the board.

The tentative plans include a large auditorium and a gymnasium. The need for the former is especially keen. There is no large public auditorium in this city, and anyone who attends an entertainment or lecture in the present small auditorium is struck with the need of a larger hall. Even the high school does not have an auditorium, and although one may be provided there in the future it will be owned jointly by Deerfield and Shields townships, and will not, therefore, be strictly a community proposition. An auditorium at Elm Place, however, would supply the present demand for a public hall.

This matter should interest everyone, and it is hoped that the voters will favor the construction of the proposed new building.

RETAIL TRADE PROSPECTS

The prospects in retail trade for 1922, as defined by representative members of the National Retail Dry Goods association in doing business in the larger cities of the United States and in doing business in the smaller centers, is for a twelve-month somewhat better, on the whole, than 1921. Recovery promises to be gradual, with very large sales volume expected from the early fall until the close of the year, according to a bulletin issued by the association.

This auspicious outlook is not held, however, throughout the south, where the uncertain future of cotton creates extreme conservatism, while the southwest hopes for a prosperous year only through large crops or higher crop prices.

Practically all agree in anticipating more stable business conditions, with prices little changed. Retail merchants have taken, during 1921, the smallest net profits on which they can do business. Any decline in prices must originate with manufacturers, whose reductions the retailer can pass on to the customer. The opinion is that the other factor capable of bringing about reduction of commodity prices is lowered freight rates.

General improvement in retail business is expected in the middle west, with the exception of the city of Cleveland, where very slow recovery is anticipated, depending largely upon conditions in steel and textile industries. Grand Rapids reports great activity in the furniture factories, which augurs well for confidence in a general business revival throughout the country. The feeling is that prices are gradually being stabilized. The close of 1922 should see prices somewhat lower than they are today.

PUBLICITY A SAFEGUARD

One danger in a representative popular government such as ours is that the people, busy with the great task of making a living and preparing for the tax collector, will not give time enough to the study of public questions. The masses of the people are honest in their purposes, deeply patriotic, and highly intelligent — even those whose school education has been far too limited. People who read or talk about public issues will form a reasonably accurate judgment, and, though a few may be misled by selfishly conducted propaganda, the majority will nearly always be found acting in accordance with general welfare.

The internationalists spent money freely in the effort to put over the League of Nations. There are other foreign influences at work in this country on other projects, particularly in influencing our merchant marine policy and to shape our tariff laws. They will deceive some people. Unless there is activity on the part of American publicists, they may deceive many people. It is well, therefore, that there be full discussion through the press, in public gatherings, and wherever citizens meet, with a view to determining where the best interests of America lie and how they can best be protected and maintained.
