BUSINESS OUTLOOK FOR COMING YEAR
BETTER TIMES EXPECTED
Highland Park Man Prophesies Greater Prosperity for 1922; Foresees Period of Hard Competition
 By CLINT MCDADE
 At the prices which the farmer received for his crop last fall, ten bushels of oats would buy a good necktie; a couple of three year old grasser steers would buy an overcoat and it is quite possible that a big husky farmer could carry enough cow hides on his back to buy a cheap pair of children's shoes.
 The owner of a copper mine could not sell his 1921 product for enough to pay his help. Those who are statistically inclined could fill volumes with comparisons showing striking inequalities between commodities of various types.
 All this brings us to the conclusion that the outstanding feature of 1922 will be an adjustment of commodity prices and wages.
 Farm products, sugar, coffee, copper, rubber and zinc and other commodities which have been selling below prewar levels, are due for a raise, while household furniture, crude oil, steel, iron and many other commodities which are still in the clouds when compared with prewar quotations, will either decline or remain stagnant.
 There seems to be a good deal of difference in opinion among the authorities as to what will happen in real estate, but it seems safe to assume that industrial property will fall in price along with the less desirable residential property while prices may temporarily remain firm or even advance in well located residential sections. Certainly there is nothing to justify the boom in real estate values, which some real estate men are predicting on the ground that a building boom is five years overdue. Real estate values are so largely a matter of locality that no general prediction will apply to any particular section. The decline in commodity prices started in May, 1920, while the decline in real estate values did not start until the fall of 1921. Naturally, the conclusion is that the general trend of real estate will be downward at least for two years. I refer to realty other than that used for agricultural purposes.
 Manufacturing in general should be about 60 per cent of capacity during 1922. This compares with approximately 40 per cent of capacity in 1921 or an increase in activity of approximately 50 per cent over 1921. Competition will be terrific and disastrous for the weak and poorly managed institution. There were 19,400 failures with listed liabilities in excess of $600,000,000 during 1921. This compares with the 1915 high record of 22,000 failures but liabilities of 1921 bankrupts were somewhat in excess of 1915 figures.
 There will probably be about as many more failures during 1922. Last year banks tried to tide everybody over because, when there was no business, it was hard to pick live concerns. This year energetic, well-managed concerns will begin to forge ahead and the banks will withdraw support from weaker concerns to take care of the needs of those who are clearly on the upgrade.
 Lest the reader get the idea from the above statement that money will be tight, I want to say that the opposite will be the case, except in the rural districts of the South and West. Banks in larger centers are eager to make loans on good collateral at low rates.
 Business is going to be good in lines which supply the living needs of the people such as clothing, food products, automobile tires and residential building supplies. Lines like fertilizers, paving materials, household furniture and confectionery have fair prospects. The prospects for agricultural implements, musical instruments, structural iron and steel and similar lines, are very poor indeed. In other words the firm which produces the things which people eat and wear will have first call on the public pocket-book while the firm supplying equipment for new mills, factories and machine shops will hardly get any business at all. In all between these two extremes there are a great many businesses which will thrive in proportion to the manner in which they are necessary to support the activities of the first group.
 It is logical to assume that the recovery will come first in the North and East where the depression was first felt, then it will spread to the Central West and South—then to the Southwest and finally to the Pacific Coast. The Pacific Coast is now almost as far away from permanent recovery as New England was a year ago.
 The farmer is now down and out, but the fall of 1922 will bring a decided change for the better. His crops will bring in more money than they did in 1921 while the things he buys will cost less. This does not mean that the farmer will be enjoying prosperity this fall. I merely indicate that we can now say that the worst is here as far as the farmer is concerned. The vice-president of a large farm mortgage house was recently asked to give his opinion as to when the farmer would be able to
