INCREASED TARIFF WOULD BENEFIT FEW

That the proposed new high tariff on wool which is being considered by the Senate would be unfair to the American people, and would benefit only a small group of large ranch owners in the west, is the substance of a communication received by J. B. Garnett of this city from Cohen, Goldman & Co., 46 West 18th street, New York early this week. The letter follows:
Mr. J. B. Garnett,
Highland Park, Ill.
Gentlemen:

We feel it our duty to notify all of our customers that if the proposed tariff on raw wool is passed, the retail price of a man's all wool suit of clothes will go up about $4 and an overcoat about $7.50 at retail. This would mean a curtailment of your clothing business and we feel that you should be made aware of the facts.

The Senate is considering a tariff on raw wool of 33 cents on the clean content of the pound. If adopted this will mean an 83 percent increase over the high Payne-Aldrich tariff, which ex-President Taft characterized as "indefensible."

It will cost the American people about $360,000,000 a year. And this to protect the raw wool industry with a total annual output of only $65,000,000.

The reason is that this 33 cents grows to $1 a pound after it has passed through the hands of the wool dealer, the spinner, the cloth manufacturer, the clothing manufacturer and the retailer, after each one has added his overhead and profit.

Moreover, the tariff taxes all wools alike, regardless of quality or cost, which will practically put an embargo on the lower grade wools, and the workingman and the average farmer will have to be satisfied with wool substitutes, cotton or shoddy.

The wool tariff will not even protect the farmer, because only 7 per cent of the farmers of this country grow any wool. Of those who do only a small fraction of 1 per cent grow it in commercial quantities, so that the farmer as a class will be taxed more for their clothes than they will get in the enhanced price of wool.

The bill is not a protective measure, because half of this tariff would be ample protection. It will cost the American people $360,000,000 and will merely enrich a comparatively few large ranch owners in the west.

The only thing that will modify the bill is a widespread protest. If you will write to your congressman protesting against this useless extravagance, and if you will run one or two advertisements in your local newspaper letting your customers know how much this wasteful legislation is going to cost them, you will be protecting your own business, and you will be doing your duty towards your community.

Very truly yours,
Cohen, Goldman & Co.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION PROGRAM FORMULATED

Seventy universities, colleges and theological seminaries affiliated with the Methodist church of America are to co-operate in the near future in a program of religious education whose outreach will be more direct and sweeping than anything heretofore attempted, if plans formulated yesterday at a conference at Northwestern University, Evanston, develop successfully. Of a joint commission on personnel and religious education formed by church officials and educators, President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern is chairman and Walter D. Agnew, of Columbia University, New York, is secretary. Other members of the joint commission who were present were:

Prof. Norman E. Richardson, Northwestern University; Joseph C. Nate assistant secretary of the school board of education of the Methodist church; President Edwin W. Dunlavy, Cliff School of Theology, Denver; Evans A. Worthley, of the commission on life service of the Methodist church; Prof. A. C. Piersel, Illinois Wesleyan University; and Prof. Edgar D. Brightman, Boston University. Dean James A. James of Northwestern University graduate school also attended. The findings will be made this summer and reported by President Scott to a fall conference called by the board of education either in New York or Chicago. The plan at present as outlined, in brief, is as follows:

To standardize a curriculum in the seventy institutions as to religious education with an eye to the people at large, not especially to educate men for the ministry of men and women for missionary work, but to so instill the Christian philosophy into the minds of the rising generation as to make men and women of the future more efficient in church and Sunday school work, more effective in charitable enterprises, and, at home and abroad, living exponents of Christian principles.

To take stock of the personnel of the Methodist church and of affiliated colleges with a view of presenting to the rising generation the opportunities for service in that church, and to help the present-day ministers to place a new value upon their own efforts.

Prof. Norman E. Richardson, professor of religious education at Northwestern, is completing a questionnaire among 400 Methodist ministers respecting their work.
