that are specially built for us out of "Hardy Hide" leather. A leather that goes through a certain oil process at the factory, making the shoes stand the hardest of wear, as well as it makes shoes absolutely damp proof.

Try a pair for your children, and you will be convinced that these shoes are positively the most serviceable and the most comfortable that shoes can be.

extent, altho appearances indicate that the crisis may have passed and conditions may be expected to get better rather than worse from now on.

It has of course been necessary for us to curtail shipments of cement to a great many contractors, which we only did through absolute necessity, brought about by utter scarcity of cement.

It so happens that the Universal Cement Company is furnishing cement in your particular territory and that we have no contracts with any other cement companies for this territory. Conditions seem to be improving with the Universal Cement Company and we anticipate that their shipments will get better daily. However, it will be some time, if at all, this season, before all jobs keep running at normal, and with this idea in view I am writing you to furnish me with a priority or preferred list of sections which you feel justified, on account of attending circumstances, should be placed in this priority classification. By this I mean there may be certain sections which will require only a few cars to complete, or certain sections where the local people are particularly inconvenienced over and above other sections.

We have the situation in this respect fairly well in hand with regard to our own Bond Issue and Federal Aid work, but are not as familiar with the county work, for which reason I would appreciate, as soon as possible, a report along the lines requested.

In addition I wish to assure you that we are making every endeavor to get all of the cement possible to your county and wish to cooperate with you to the fullest extent under the circumstances, and also, I wish to thank you for your toleration in the past for I realize that it has been an extremely difficult situation to cope with, particularly with regard to the financial loss which it is causing contractors and the inconvenience which it is causing the public.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) C. M. Hathaway,
Engineer of Construction.

Claimed there is too much "muddy thinking." This is not surprising when you consider how many people's names are Mudd.

PLANT EVERGREENS
NOW, SAYS ROCKWELL

MANY VARIETIES OFFERED

White Fir Excellent For Specimen Trees; Nordmann's Silver Fir Gracefully Proportioned

By F. F. ROCKWELL
Horticultural Editor "Farm and Fireside."

Now is the time to plant your evergreen trees. The planting season in the fall for evergreens is any time from August 15, to October 15. There is far more time to give to the planting of ornamentals in the fall than in the spring, when there is almost always a rush of work to be accomplished in garden, grounds, and fields.

It is taken for granted that you are planning to plant at least a few evergreens, if you have any garden space at all, and want a beautiful home. Landscape gardeners are using evergreens, if you have any garden space character to a place. The evergreens contribute a permanent feature to the home, place—for there they stand spring, summer, autumn and winter as firmly established and just as effective as the buildings.

There are so many ways in which to use the evergreens successfully, that it is quite impossible to enumerate them all. In almost any capacity for the home grounds, they are found to be most striking and attractive. They may be used as specimen trees to stand alone on the lawn; as a background for the house; or as a windbreak to shield the house from the north winds; as a dark setting behind the shrubs or flower borders; or as a hedge or screen for some unsightly building.

Some of the Most Satisfactory Evergreens

There are many splendid varieties which may be used as specimen trees, either singly on the lawn or on either side of the piazza steps, path or driveway. The White Fir of the Rocky Mountains is excellent for this purpose. It grows to be 80 to 100 ft. is one of the handsomest in cultivation, is most hardy and of rapid growth. It is very graceful, and its foliage is a beautiful blue above and silver beneath.

The Nordmann's Silver Fir is a gracefully proportioned tree, and is just the thing where a dense, dark growth is required. It grows moderately fast until it finally reaches an imposing size.

The Juniper or Red Cedar trees are mostly pyramidal in form and are fine for landscape work, to be used as a specimen tree where a formal effect is desired.

There can be no more lovely ornamental for lawn use, nor any tree that attracts more attention and admiration than the Blue Spruce, Picea Kosterii, or Koster's Blue Spruce, is an excellent variety. It has foliage of a cloudy grayish blue, frequently described as "smokey" blue. It is sturdy and dense in its growth and it rarely fails to gain notice from the passerby on account of its really unusual symmetry and beauty of coloring.

The White pine is an extremely stately and satisfactory tree to use as a single specimen. It is long lived and hardy, and is one of the most beautiful of our native pines, and one of the most rapid growers.

Evergreens for Hedges
The many varieties of Thuja or Arbor Vitae are commonly used for hedge planting or for screens. The Occidentalis or American Arborvitae is well known as a screen or hedge plant. It can grow to large size, but is generally sheared or trimmed down. There is also the Occidentalis pyramidalis, that grows in a tall, slender column, resembling the Irish Yew. It is hardy and keeps its rich dark green color all the year round.

Then there is the Canadensis, a variety of Hemlock Spruce, which is well suited for a free spreading, graceful specimen tree, or it can be pruned or trained into a dense growth for use in hedges or as a screen. It is of very hardy habit in its growth and lives to a good old age.

Buy Evergreens with "Ball and Burlap"
Those mentioned above are merely a few of the most striking of the evergreens. In sending for these or any other evergreen trees or bushes to the nursery, it is generally wise to pay a little extra for each tree in order to have it sent with a ball of earth around its roots wrapped in burlap. This always insures a more successful planting.

It is better to plant the tree immediately upon its arrival. If this is not possible, however, be sure to keep the fibrous roots well protected from the sun and air, to prevent them from drying out. Dig the hole deep enough to take in the roots and ball of earth without breaking or bruising them. Enrich the earth well before planting with a couple of forkfuls of manure and two or three handfuls of bone, mixing both well into the soil before planting.

The secret of successful planting of shrubs and trees is to pack the earth, or "firm" the earth snugly about the roots in planting. This firm planting is of the greatest importance to protect the tree from hard winds or the heaving of the soil in winter and spring. Therefore, if success is to be achieved, be careful to pack the soil solidly around the roots.
