STUDENT PRODIGY AT NORTHWESTERN

IS VERSATILE YOUNGSTER

Willmore J. Kendall, Jr. Comes From Oklahoma and Braves Screen Limelight and Rostrum; Age 13

Besides being a "boy prodigy" in his studies, Willmore Kendall, Jr., 13 year old youngster from Mangum, Oklahoma, who has just entered Northwestern University, promises to be a good screen artist if recent tests amount to anything. Northwestern University offered him as news material to a news film service and the camera man said he'd try, though a bit dubious as to how the lad would comport himself in front of a thousand candlepower light and a moving film.

The youthful Willmore in short trousers and a real school-boy smile entered into the thing with enthusiasm. He trudged up the steps of University Hall lugging a huge satchel (the arrival of the lad from the tall grass, you know), blithely entered into the intellectual atmosphere of the president's office and with perfect composure shook hands with Dr. Walter Dill Scott and Dean Roy C. Flickinger.

Then the unrelenting camera man made Willmore perform in a classroom. The lad actually trembled a little when going through this ordeal but screened well at the blackboard with an assortment of critical students just behind him. Not satisfied with this punishment, the camera man decreed that Willmore, Jr., must be introduced to members of the football squad. This was done as follows: Willmore met Jimmy Paterson, captain of the team, and several huskies in regulation fashion, handshaking and that sort of thing. Then following secret instructions from the camera man, the moleskin heroes suddenly lifted Willmore off his feet and passed him from one to the other. Willmore wriggled and kicked but he went along just the same.

Lastly Willmore, who was the best of forty highschool pupils at Mangum in the art of after-dinner speaking, braved the big lights again and made a real address while the film clicked off the expressive shadows. He never flinched but refused, absolutely refused, to make gestures. Charles T. Chapman the camera man, forgave him for this however.

"He's a good boy and mighty game," said Mr. Chapman. "I wouldn't be surprised to hear of him on the screen some day in something big."

SHAKESPEARE PLAYS AT CHICAGO HOUSE

Fritz Leiber, Noted Actor, With Strong Supporting Cast, at Olympic Theatre

Fritz Leiber, leading Shakespearean actor, surrounded by a distinguished supporting company, will play a three weeks' engagement at the Olympic Theatre, Chicago, beginning Monday night, September 25, under the management of George Ford.

This will afford drama lovers their first opportunity of seeing this sterling actor following his sensational engagement at the William A. Brady's Forty-eighth Street theatre, New York City, where he played to 100,000 people in five weeks, a new world's record.

By presenting Shakespearean plays humanly and naturally, Mr. Leiber is popularizing the classics. Interest also centers in his new and beautiful method of mounting and lighting the immortal dramas.

Among the playbills to be offered by the Leiber organization will be "MacBeth," "Hamlet," "Romeo and Juliet," "Merchant of Venice," "Othello," "Taming of the Shrew" and "Julius Caesar."

THE HOPEFUL HEN THAT SAT ON THE CHINA EGG

The hen that sat upon the china egg had the proper principles of propagation and praiseworthy perseverance, but she didn't, because she couldn't, produce. The Guild of Typography demands far more than copious fonts and creditable intentions. Our success, if we may be pardoned for alluding to a minor matter of major significance, is due to cleaving single-mindedly and sincerely to the idea that if you give the finest there is, competition will leave you alone, but clients won't.

GET UP!

Oliver Goldsmith whose path of life was by no means a smooth one—said that our greatest glory consists not in never falling—but in rising every time we fall.

Dollars and sense usually go together.

Woman's dresses are coming down in length. Alas! we fear not in price!

Barnum wasn't the first man to discover there is one born every minute. He just gave vigorous voice to it.
