

LOWDEN INDORSES NEW CONSTITUTION

BEFORE BAR ASSOCIATION

In Address at Oregon Last Week
Former Governor Declares
Proposed Basic Law
Improvement

Hearty endorsement was given the proposed new constitution by former Governor Frank O. Lowden, in an address at Oregon, Ill., last week, before members of the Illinois State Bar Association of the sixth district.

"The more I have studied the work of the recent Constitutional convention," Governor Lowden said, "the more thoroughly I am convinced that it framed a very great instrument, the adoption of which will vastly benefit the people of our state."

No constitution, "can satisfy completely any one man. Strong men may agree upon a few of the fundamental principles of government, but it is humanly impossible for them to hold identical opinions upon a complete framework of government," he continued. "Necessarily, therefore, every written constitution must in part at least, be the result of compromise."

"This was true of our federal constitution. And strange as it may seem, those parts of the constitution which were the result of compromise have come to be regarded as among the most valuable contributions to our government of the great body which framed that instrument."

He went into the various sections of the new constitution, heartily endorsing the revenue article, the legislative restrictions which require that printed copies of all bills be before members at least three days prior to time of passing, the more liberal provision regarding amendment of the constitution and others.

"I know of no important provision of the old constitution that has been generally approved by the people which is omitted from the present document," Governor Lowden declared. "On the other hand, there are many substantial improvements."

RADIO EVENTS OF LIVE STOCK SHOW

Plan to Broadcast Results of Chief Competitions at Big Exposition

The wonderful growth of radio transmission during the past year will enable the outcome of the various competitions at the International Live Stock Exposition to be known throughout the country almost before the applause of the spectators subsides in the arena.

Station WAAF is located directly across the street from the amphitheatre where the contests will be staged from Dec. 2 to Dec. 9 and arrangements have been made to get the judges' awards into the hands of the radio announcer and broadcasted with a minimum of delay. The folks back home, who are unable to attend the premier show, will be able to learn how their favorites fared in the supreme court of agriculture within a few minutes after the decisions are rendered. The progress of the agricultural college teams in the closely contested judging competitions can be followed step by step by their fellow students gathered around the campus receiving sets with the enthusiasm peculiar to intercollegiate contests.

The advent of the radio and its wide spread adoption throughout the country will serve to even further extend the beneficial influence by carrying its message to untold numbers of people who could not be present in person at the 'International' itself.

INCREASED USE OF CURRENT REPORTED

Public Service Company Takes
This as Indication of Better Times

All modern industrial plants place heavy dependence on electric power. Accordingly there is additional strong evidence of the steady improvement in manufacturing and general business especially in the great industrial zone served by it in the figures of the Public Service company's output of electrical energy.

September 14, 1922 it was 81,404 k. w., that point being reached at 8:00 p. m., central time. The corresponding maximum was for September 15, 1921, amounting to 69,649 k. w.

September 27, 1922, the output of the company's stations was 88,005 k. w. at 8:00 p. m. The corresponding maximum for 1921 was 71,354 k. w. occurring on Wednesday, September 28. This is an increase for 1922 over the preceding year amounting to 23 per cent.

The industrial revival as said is reflected in these figures. Some of the industries are running two or three shifts. The company's statistical department says indications are that the maximum output for 1921 which came on December 30 will be largely exceeded by the "peak" of 1922.

The company is connecting up electric and gas customers this year at a rate considerable in excess of 1921.

THE HISTORY OF "THE GREEN GODDESS"

Only Four Cities in U. S. Have Seen Play; 600th Performance
Nov. 11

"The Green Goddess," a play of adventure by William Archer, was produced by Winthrop Ames at the Walnut st. Theatre in Philadelphia on December 27, 1920, with George Arliss as the star. After playing that city three weeks (24 performances), the drama opened its New York engagement at the Booth Theatre on January 18, 1921, and remained at that theatre for 438 performances, terminating its run on February 4, 1922. On February 6, 1922, "The Green Goddess" began its Boston run at the Plymouth Theatre, giving a total of 90 performances in the Hub; On September 30 of this year the Arliss-Ames-Archer combination appeared at the Great Northern Theatre in Chicago, where it is still running. On the afternoon of November 11, the 600th performance of "The Green Goddess" will be reached.

Following the Chicago engagement of the drama, a tour of the chief cities east of Kansas City will be made, but the success of the piece in Chicago makes the beginning of this tour indefinite. Mr. Arliss was to have taken Mr. Archer's work to London last summer, but New York refused to let him go. It is now planned to present "The Green Goddess" in London next August, with Mr. Arliss in his original role of the Raja of Rukh.

Lucilla, the heroine of "The Green Goddess," has during these 600 performances, worn out three evening gowns and five traveling suits, as well as three aviator hats and eight pairs of shoes, the latter being explained by the particularly hard usage to which Lucilla's shoes in the last act of the play are put.

It is perhaps, only natural that the continued success of "The Green Goddess" should have created imitators both on the speaking and the moving picture stages. In the old days such a success would have been followed by piracy, but today such proceedings go under a different but possibly no less guilty guise.

While the flappers may do indiscreet things, you never see them decorating the edge of the curbstone and trying to see which can split farthest.

Joy rides frequently have a way of ending in a sorrow-walk. The modern girl has a case of flopperitis, while the modern politician is infected with flopperitis.
