MAJ. BRADLEY RACES WITH DEATH, LOSES

FLIES TO REACH FATHER

Engine Trouble Forces Bad Landing; Plane Wrecked; Parent Dies Six Hours Previous

The following extract from a longer account in the Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser of Dec. 17, tells of the strenuous experience of Maj. Follett Bradley, brother of Mrs. Frank Fitt of Highland Park, in a desperate airplane dash from Chicago to reach his father, Colonel Alfred E. Bradley, before the latter's death in a Montgomery hospital, Dec. 16. Engine trouble near Rockford, Ala., caused a perilous descent in which the plane was wrecked, but Major Bradley and his mechanic escaped injury. The accident prevented the major from reaching his father's side before the end. The extract follows:

Thrilling Flight

"In a desperate attempt to outdistance death in a dash to the bedside of his dying father, Major Follett Bradley, World war hero, and aviator in the army air service, stationed at Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill., faced thrilling and hazardous experiences on an airplane flight from Chicago to Montgomery—and then lost in the race.

"His father, Col. Alfred E. Bradley, died Saturday about noon. Major Bradley, his progress delayed by unfavorable weather and mishaps, reached the city early Saturday night, to find that death preceded him to his father's bedside by about six hours.

Plane Disabled

"Major Bradley arrived here by automobile, after his flying machine had been disabled as a result of engine trouble and a precarious landing four miles west of Rockford, Ala., in Coosa county, Saturday afternoon. He was forced to descend in a treacherous stretch of country when the engine of his plane suddenly balked at an altitude of 800 feet. Neither Major Bradley nor his mechanic received injuries in the accident.

"Skilled in aerial activities, an expert pilot and twice promoted for gallantry in the World war, Major Bradley selected the air route in an effort to reach Montgomery before his father's death. He left Chicago Friday afternoon, after receiving a message of Colonel Bradley's critical illness! With the determination that characterized his heroic deeds for his country on foreign soil, he tried to complete the trip by aeroplane, in spite of a series of minor mishaps that retarded his journey and finally abandonment of the ship.

Major Bradley has frequently visited his relatives in Highland Park and has numerous friends here who will learn of his recent notable experience with marked interest.

SANTA CLAUS RECEIVES SEVERE JOLT AT FORT

Sentry Halts St. Nick on Way to Children's Entertainment Sunday Afternoon

As Santa Claus rushed through the gates at Fort Sheridan, Ill., Sunday afternoon, on his way to the Christmas Tree party for children, he was brought to a sudden halt by a sentry who demanded the reason for all this rumpus, and for his presence in the post.

"Why, I am Santa Claus," he replied, "and I must go on, the children are waiting for me."

"That won't do," said the sentry, "our General is our Santa Claus."

"That cannot be—who is poaching in my preserves. What's his name?"

"I don't know his name. I am a new man here. But it sounds like some kind of wine."

"Well! I am an expert in wines. It is claret, burgundy, sherry, port, Rhine champagne, moselle?"

"That's it. It's Moseley."

"Why, General Moseley sent me a radio-gram to be sure to be on time," retorted Santa Claus. Here it is. And that is how over two hundred children at Fort Sheridan, after being entertained by the 2nd Infantry band and singing Christmas carols, heard sleigh bells during the "Skater Waltz" played by the band, and saw Santa Claus rush in to the post gymnasium with a cargo of presents for them.

Rev. W. E. Grose of Highland Park officiated by making clear to the children the meaning of Christmas.

LOUISA ALCOTT'S STORY DRAMATIZED

berry, granddaughter of the late Colonel Walter Newberry; the amusing Prof. Bhaer impersonated by Gerald Frank who comes of a long line of artistic folk and is a painter-sculptor himself; the handsome, lovable Laurie of Jack McMahill, Jr., son of a distinguished father, well-known amateur actor; the Hannah of motherly role played by Florence Lowden, daughter of Ex-Governor Lowden and granddaughter of the late Mrs. George M. Pullman. Just a little over a year ago these ambitious amateurs launched their first play in the double interest of producing better plays for young people and raising money to build a theatre for children; and already they have climbed high on the ladder of success—personal success in their undertaking. Mrs. Richard B. Bantz is president of the League, and Miss Alice Gerstenberg its director.

Highland Park is greatly favored in having this special appearance of the Junior League and judging from the interest expressed and the advance sale of seats the townspeople will do it full honor. Tickets at $1.50 and $1.00 for sale by Mrs. Hutchinson, Mrs. Balke, Mrs. Paul, Mrs. Sanderson and Miss Ewing, the committee in charge.

If it is not sacrilegious to paraphrase the Bible we might say "spare the example and spoil the child."

TWO WOMEN TAKE THEIR OWN LIVES

road, shot herself through the right temple about 6:10 o'clock Tuesday morning, in the bath room of the McTammany home, while suffering temporary mental derangement, and died in about half an hour after arriving at the Highland Park hospital. Mrs. Reynolds home formerly was in Highland Park and she and her husband had been visiting the home of their friends, the McTammanys, for several days, en route to Milwaukee, where Mrs. Reynolds was to enter St. Joseph's sanitarium for treatment of nervous trouble, according to testimony at the inquest. She was mother of a child aged four months, and her mental trouble seems to have dated from its birth.

Uses Friend's Gun

Tuesday morning Mrs. Reynolds arose early, took to the bathroom of the house, which is inside the Highwood limits, while a portion of the front part of the home is in Highland Park. A shot sounded, and when the others in the house ran to discover the cause they found the woman on the floor with a bullet wound from a .32 calibre revolver in her right temple. The gun, it developed later, was the property of a neighbor, whose family also are old friends of the Reynolds, and the belief is that Mrs. Reynolds secured it from a dresser in that home on Monday.

Mrs. Reynolds was born in North Dakota in 1889. Her maiden name was Baker, and she was a daughter of Mr. Baker, a veteran soldier, formerly well known in Highwood, where the family resided for some years.

Inquest Is Held

The inquest was held Tuesday evening, and a verdict was returned to the effect that death was self-inflicted.

The funeral is held today, and burial will be in a Milwaukee cemetery.
