ONE CENT FINE IS IMPOSED ON VOLIVA

Result of Trial in Chicago of Famous Libel Case; Costs About $3,000.00

It cost Wilbur Glen Voliva, overseer of Zion, one cent to call the Rev. Thomas H. Nelson, independent pastor of Voliva's city, an "old ram" and a "blatherskite."

A fine of that amount with costs of the trial by which he was found guilty of criminal libel against Rev. Mr. Nelson was assessed against Voliva Saturday by Judge Jacob Hopkins, in Chicago. Motion for a new trial was overruled.

"This case has gone far enough said Judge Hopkins, in levying the fine. 'I have no particular sympathy for either Nelson or Voliva, but I am satisfied with the verdict. Each man wanted to get the better of the other disregarding the fact that ministers of the gospel ought to be examples to the rest of us.'"

In his remarks he said there was some politics in the case, and that in his opinion Voliva had considerable provocation. He also said that Nelson came into Zion City and became a tale bearer, and that Nelson's stories and conduct might have ruined the vast business enterprises and the church of which Voliva was the head. Judge Hopkins also said that the weakest part of the case was the indictment itself, and it might not stand in a higher court. Voliva was not present in court, although the attorneys for both sides were present.

The Rev. Mr. Nelson accepted the sentence as a vindication. The costs in the case so far are estimated at about $3,000.

CHICAGO HAS TWO BIGGEST GAS DAYS

February Cold Snap Boosts The Use of Gas in Big City; Record Broken

On account of a recent cold wave, Feb. 14 and 15 were the two biggest days in the history of the gas business in Chicago.

On Feb. 14, The Peoples Gas Light and Coke company "sent out" through the mains to customers 111,500,000 cubic feet, or the largest amount of gas ever distributed in the city. The second biggest "send-out" was on the following day, when 108,000,000 cubic feet of gas were used by Chicago's people. The previous high record was on Dec. 18, 1922, when the amount sent out was 104,500,000 cubic feet. The tremendous size of these figures indicated when it is recalled that the size of Denver, Colo., uses only about 8,000,000 cubic feet in 24 hours.

While the cold wave was largely responsible for the recent breaking of records, it is also indicative that householders are more and more depending upon gas for heating purposes, especially for supplemental or auxiliary heating when the furnaces, hot water and steam heating system is not quite up to the demands upon it.

BLIND FRESHMAN TAKING ATHLETICS

Making Good Progress in N. W. Gymnasium Training; Great Benefit

Carl W. Bostrom, blind freshman in the college of liberal arts at Northwestern university, who makes his way on the campus through a nervous susceptibility to air currents and humidity, is now learning to perform on the bars and mats at Patten gymnasium at Evanston.

Because of his handicap, Mr. Bostrom cannot walk fast enough to obtain any effective exercise, and it is quite impossible for him to run. Hence, the need of some form of gymnastics to offset a sedentary life.

Under the supervision of Prof. Leon Kranz of the department of physical education at Northwestern, Bostrom is already becoming expert in the knack of tumbling and handling dumb-bells. Prof. Kranz is starting him out with simple programs, but expects to develop Bostrom into a fair all-round gymnast by the end of the semester.

CHESS TOURNEY IS PLAN OF UNIVERSITY

Much Interest Manifested of Late in College Circles in Ancient Game

American tourists in the Near East, among whom are several well known Chicago people, have been forbidden by the Turkish Government at Angora to take pictures of any of the refugee camps of the suffering people, according to word received here today by F. J. Michel, Executive Secretary of Near East Relief.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. M. Reynolds and their daughter Katherine, Mr. and Mrs. Burridge Butler, Samuel Hastings, Dr. George Paul Marquis and Miss Dorothy Lamont, daughter of the president of the American Steel Foundries company, were among the tourists who were carefully watched by Turkish officials who insisted that no pictures be taken.

"The American tourists were horrified at the desperate plight of these people who, a few short weeks before, had been prosperous peasants and cultivators of tobacco in Samsun, Trebizond, Sivas and Tokat, and who, but for American aid would now be left to die," reads the cable received by Mr. Michel at the Chicago headquarters of Near East Relief, 19 S. La Salle street.

When the Caronia dropped anchor in the Bosphorus, the tourists asked to be shown "some of those starving refugees we hear so much about." H. C. Jaquith, Overseas Director of Near East Relief, took them to the refugee camps on the Black Sea where 30,000 Ottoman Greeks expelled from the interior of Anatolia by the Turks, are now quartered. It was here that the Turkish authorities refused to allow any pictures to be taken.

Claimed that people should study etiquette and avoid social errors. If they keep their mouths shut, they will not make any mistakes in their speech.

It is understood that they will not manufacture any of their explosive fireworks there. They supply floats and pageant effects for canvas outfits all over the world.

MAY RAISE CROPS UPON SAND DUNES

EXPERT IS INVESTIGATING

Northwestern Professor Makes Careful Survey and Says Legumes May be Raised on Waste Land

Crops of economic value may soon be cultivated on the stretches of waste lands known as the dunes of northern Indiana and Michigan.

The hope of finding crops that may be made to flourish on this soil has been one of the motives for extensive experiments during the last three years by W. G. Waterman, assistant professor of botany at Northwestern university. Further tests are to be made this spring and summer.

May Raise Legumes

"Our experiments," said Prof. Waterman, "point to the conclusion that by the introduction of a comparatively small quantity of fertilizer into the dune sands, it will be possible to raise farm crops of the legume type. Efforts during the summer will be concerned chiefly with the soy bean as its cultivation appears most easily adaptable to dune conditions."

Growth of crops, Prof. Waterman said, would be confined to the fixed dunes, cultivation being out of the question where the sands are constantly shifting.

"While irrigation is the main need of many desert stretches," according to Prof. Waterman, "it would not solve the problem of plant culture on the dune area. Below the first few centimeters in pure dune soil moisture is evenly distributed. Mineral salts and decayed organic matter are practically absent from the dune sands. It is this material that the farmer would have to supply by fertilization."

Finds Organic Matter

Prof. Waterman found that roots of certain kinds of plants followed minute black lines in the sands. These lines are believed to be decayed organic matter. This finding has suggested the possibility that the farmer might plow trenches in the dune soil, partly fill these with leaf and vegetable matter with some commercial fertilizer added and then plant his seeds.

Whether the economic value of the crops would compensate for the slightly additional burden of cultivation cannot be determined fully until the results of this summer's experiments are known.

Present outlook is that the American people will wear out more tire rubber than shoe leather this summer.

TURKS FORBIDDING TOURISTS PICTURES

Refuse to Permit Americans to Take Photographs of Refugee Camps

A chess tournament at Northwestern University, for which both men and women will be eligible, has been scheduled to be run off during the next few weeks. Robert Dickson, a junior in the college of liberal arts, who is managing the tournament, says that much enthusiasm has been shown for the game lately, probably because of the national prominence which chess has attained.

Mr. Dickson has been investigating the extent to which chess is played as a competitive game in the various Big Ten universities. He has found that Northwestern, Indiana and Purdue are the only ones not having chess on their list.

A great deal of interest has been shown lately for the game and the athletic association at Northwestern has offered a silver cup for the champion. The semi-finals will be played by April 15 and the championship should be decided a few days later than that.

RARE MUSIC HEARD IN SONGS OF BIRDS

Spring Season One of Special Delight Because of Delightful Melodies

The spring is a season of special delight to all who love nature, since in that time of romance the birds are singing at the tops of their voices and filling the land with cheery melody.

The recognition of favorite songsters and learning of new ones, is one of the pleasures of springtime. Knowledge of this kind is a permanent possession. The song of a particular species of bird is an individual thing, with a distinctive character. Once you learn it, you know it always, and would recognize it after many years, as you would the voice of a long absent friend.

The human race has been perfecting musical instruments for 5000 years. But it would have to be a very fine violin, held at a high price that could make a tone as beautiful as the little bird that sings its liquid note in the back yards of Highland Park which suggests that the simple pleasures within everyone's reach are often the sweetest.

The American people worry for three months about making out their income tax, and then they worry nine months about paying it.
