AIR TRANSPORTS CARRY REGIMENTS

FUTURE OF DIRIGIBLES

Admiral Moffett Predicts Time Will Come When Soldiers And Airplanes Will Be Thus Carried

The army air service is going be- yond even the prediction of Rear Ad- miral W. A. Moffet that the navy's huge dirigible, ZR-1, will cruise around the world and conquer the north and south poles.

The army's goal, which may be reached in a decade, is to transport to the battle front battalions and even regiments of infantry, fully equipped for battle, in huge armored air ships, filled with non-inflammable helium and immune to anti-craft fire. Maj. Oscar Westover of the lighter-than-air service, sees a vast future for airships in future wars. He says:

"In our military requirements rigid airships will answer our purposes for long range reconnaissance, for bomb- ing, for transportation of supplies to the army in the field, where supplies can be transported largely at night and over fairly long stretches where the roads are impassable, and for other needs, but the great require- ments for them will be when we have experimented a little further and have found that we can transport in one of these airships a battalion of infantry, and subsequently a regiment of infantry.

Airplanes on Airships
"We confidently feel that the de- velopment in the next eight or ten years will make possible the trans- portation of a regiment of infantry in one airship, and will most certainly make possible the carrying of air- planes aboard such large rigid air- ships—not only the carrying of them but the release of them at will, so that we can take a flock of six or eight airplanes, transport them over a long distance, without drawing on their strength at all, and use them for military purposes from the air- ship base in a foreign field.

"When we consider the proposed development along this line—and I may say that Great Britain has ex- perimented with the airship-airplane carrier and has successfully landed an airplane on an airship and then dispatched it from the airship—when we realize that development it brings us face to face with the fact that the hydrogen-filled airships every nation is going to concentrate on the destruc- tion of enemy airships by the effect of incendiary bullets.

U. S. Control of Helium
"Not alone will it be possible to de- stroy it by fire unless by chance the gasoline tank is hit—a very remote possibility—but the use of helium will enable us to armor that airship and use it in the air in an armored cap- acity, and enable us to carry long- range guns for combating aircraft."

Maj. Westover has faith in the ability of the United States to pro- duce sufficient helium to fill all the gas bags of the aerial force of the American military and naval com- mands. This government now con- trols all the helium-bearing gases of the world.

"I recently made a trip to Europe and visited some of the airship cen- ters," Maj. Westover said. "I can speak, I believe, with conviction when I say that Italy, France, England and Germany are prepared at once to launch major airship programs if called upon. The reason for this is that they have the plants."

Like all the foremost army and navy aeronautical experts, Maj. Westover looks to the development of the commercial airships of the larger types as a necessary part of the American military policy.

Deerfield Citizens

Your "Home Town" is on the verge of development into a prominent sub- urban community. The questions of sewers, streets and other improve- ments will determine whether the Village will grow in a way to benefit the present residents.

These questions should be placed in the hands of men pledged to follow competent advice in planning for the future good of your home-town. Not necessarily for any sweeping reforms at once, but to adopt a conservative scheme that will in time be carried through as the people desire.

The Citizens Party headed by Lin- coln Pettis placed a ticket in the field to present to the voters a body of men pledged to carry out such a program. Let's have Deerfield government rep- resent the will of the Voters.

The Citizens ticket is pledged to a definite platform.
