Auction Sale of Pure Bred and High-Grade Registered MILK GOATS

ON Saturday, June 30, 1923, at Delavan Lake, Wis.
CHARLES A. STEVENS' Summer Home—North Shore of Lake

Chas. A. Stevens will place on sale over 100 pure bred and high grade registered milk goats, including a fine selection of pure bred bucks and does in mature animals and kids of the famous Toggenburg breed. Also a few ultra choice Nubians.

Every animal will have a price (a placard or tag) placed upon it about 10 a. m. About 2:30 p.m. all not sold at private sale will be withdrawn and sold at auction to the highest bidder without reserve.

Many of you who read this have sought recently to buy these kids or goats and have been told that none would be sold until the day of the sale.

The reason was that we did not want to sell the kids away from their mothers, nor the does away from the kids, until the kids were old enough to be separated.

Even at this late date of June 30 we will be obliged to sell a few does with their kids.

If interested in starting a herd of Milk Goats don't fail to attend this sale and secure the right kind of Foundation Stock

Official registration certificate and pedigree furnished with every animal. Come prepared to pay for the animals you buy and take them away with you. You can very conveniently carry several of them in a small car—they like automobile riding.

Have pure and better milk for your children! Many homes are so situated that they can conveniently keep a goat; but not a cow. In ten years the milk goat will be to the milk industry what the Ford is to the automobile industry

A MILK GOAT IS HEALTH INSURANCE FOR YOUR YOUNGSTERS

A complete list, giving the registered names and numbers of all these animals, showing also the sire and dam, with their register numbers, the date born from which you can calculate the age, with the price at which each animal will be placed on private sale for three hours before the auction. This list is now in preparation and will be ready for mailing by the time you read this advertisement. Write for it today.

WAR DEPARTMENT IS DISCOUNTING BILLS

Makes Perfect Record in Matter of Economy Effort, According to Report

One of the business methods introduced by the present administration in daily operation of the federal government for the purpose of saving money is the simple, time-honored practice of promptly paying bills in order to take advantage of discounts offered. A recent report of the war department to Director Lord of the budget bureau shows that under the present administration it is discounting 99.51 per cent of all bills which permit of a discount. By this pracice the war department has saved $151,019 during the first ten months of the present fiscal year. At the last report of the department to the budget bureau there were on hand in the entire war department throughout the United States only 250 unpaid bills over 30 days old.

HOW ARTISTS CAN EXPRESS MOVEMENT

One of the Most Difficult of Their Problems; Samples Are Evidence

How can artists express movement? It is one of the most difficult problems with which they have to contend. We all enjoy movement. Nothing stands still, from the busy ant to the revolving earth. Who does not love to be projected through space at high speed. Look at the number arrested for speeding! And we have the motion picture. One great feature of this industry is that it is not a movement in art, but art in movement. Some of the wizards of the screen give us the beautiful landscapes of an Inness, or a Corot, or a Hobbema, and not only do they do that, but they give us Inness, and Corot, and Hobbema in motion. But how can a painter express movement?

It is interesting to note how the master-painters attack this problem. In the Inness gallery at the Art Institute there is a picture called "Threatening." A man stands outside of a low shed nonchalantly watching the sky. Off in the middle distance the houses of a town are barely discernible through the oncoming masses of rain-clouds. You feel that the clouds are in motion and you also feel that they are heavy with rain. It is a masterpiece in suggested movement. And you know that the nonchalance of the man is due to the fact that he can run for shelter in the wink of an eye, and that if he does not, in a few minutes he'll be as wet as a drowned rat.

GRAND JURY RETURNS ELEVEN TRUE BILLS

Thirteen Cases Were Investigated; Robberies, Assaults And Other Crimes

The Lake county grand jury last week returned 11 true bills out of 13 cases under investigation.

The indictments are against Raymond Mills and Herbert Washburn, Waukegan young men charged with robbing the safe of the Waukegan Lumber company last Friday night, and who the police declare have confessed to other recent local "jobs."

Sven Hannu residing west of Waukegan is charged with assault with a deadly weapon. It is charged his machine struck Paul Sprindlis, Tenth street youth, seriously injuring him, and that Hannu then sped away leaving Sprindlis helpless.

Charles Harry O'Keefe, Waukegan young man, charged with having drawn a worthless check for $15 and having William J. Sackman cash it. Morris Gordon, Chicago, charged with operating an automobile in a reckless manner, which resulted, it is alleged, in injury to seven persons. Gordon is named on two counts.

RADIO TO CONNECT ALASKA WITH WORLD

WHEN PRESIDENT VISITS

Navy Maintains Nine Stations Along Coast and Others in Interior Will Be Available

A few years ago a trip to Alaska was regarded as separating a traveler farther from civilization than a trip to South Africa, South America or Asia. This was due largely to the fact that there was no communication between Alaska and the outside world except by means of boat. The distance from Alaska to Seattle is approximately 1,000 miles and the schedule of boats was very irregular and uncertain.

In Touch With Washington

When President Harding, accompanied by some of his cabinet and others of the party, make their trip to Alaska this summer, they will be in as close touch with the government at Washington as the president was when he was on his trip to Florida. This is largely due to the development of the radio. All existing facilities for telegraph and radio communication in Alaska are government owned.

Nine Navy Stations

The navy maintains nine radio stations along the coast of Alaska. These stations are very powerful and maintain contact directly with large radio stations situated in the United States. The army maintains radio stations throughout Alaska, having a station located at approximately every 200 miles along the lines of travel and telegraph wire systems. The principal army radio stations are situated at such isolated but strategic points as Fort Egbert, on the Canadian Alaska border; Fort Yukon, within the Arctic Circle; Nome, on Seward Peninsula separating Bering Sea from the Arctic Ocean; St. Michael, on Norton Sound; Holy Cross, on the Yukon River; and McGrath on the Kuskokwin River.

Telegraph System

In addition the army has a telegraph wire system reaching from Cordova on the Gulf of Alaska north to Fairbanks, thence east throughout the country to Fort Gibbons, thence to Nulato. In addition to this, the government's railroad has a telegraph system. In addition to communication from Alaska to the United States by radio, there is one cable. These facilities are sufficient to enable the president and his party to keep in intimate touch with the seat of government at Washington throughout his Alaskan journey.

ROOMS IN HOSPITAL TO EX-SERVICE MEN

Ten of Them Provided by The County in the Memorial Institution

Appearing before the supervisors with regard to the $20,000 appropriation for the memorial to the ex-service men of Lake county, which has been erected at Victory Memorial hospital, Judge Claire C. Edwards informed the members of the board that ten rooms in the new $300,000 hospital have been equipped for the use of ex-service men of the county and their families and that a meeting would be held to give them special rates. Judge Edwards stated that they would be taken care of at half the usual rates, and that the equipment is as fine as any in the United States, there being no hospitals in Chicago that are able to give better service.

SAYS GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP FAILS SENTIMENT AGAINST IT

Massachusetts Legislature Gets Report on Question from Representative of Civic Alliance

The trend of growing sentiment against government ownership and operation of public utilities is found in the testimony recently presented before the Massachusetts legislature's joint committee on power and light, which is making a study of the problem.

E. W. Burnstead, representing the Massachusetts Civic Alliance, appearing before the committee arraigned the failure of public ownership and operation in the following manner:

"A move for government ownership means not only that the government shall step into the business being run by private enterprise, but it means that private enterprise shall step out of this business and be excluded, and if that is done in the case of one line of industry, why not in other lines of industry?"

Argument Does Not Hold

"There is one argument usually put forward on this proposition—that of better service at less cost. That is based solely upon an assumption that government operation is less costly and more efficient than private control, but that assumption has never been proved.

"Government business is less efficient, for generally those who manage it are started in at the top and not from the bottom up, while in private business the managers are developing from office boys running up to the top. The heads of a government enterprise are frequently changed through elections and by appointment. If they develop a special ability, their heads may go off at any moment, and the department suffers loss and the government business becomes a failure.

Many Examples

"It is not necessary to remind you of the failures of government operation of the steam roads, the express service, the telegraph, the telephone, telegraph and airplane industry. Every man's pocketbook has been taxed and will be for years, because of the gross extravagance, waste and profligacy of those services."

This testimony before the Massachusetts legislature committee was given by a lay citizen. It indicates, however, the trend of public sentiment against any sort of government ownership—whether it be national, state or municipal.
