DEERFIELD MEN'S CLUB HAS ANNUAL HELD THURSDAY EVENING

Village Improvement Association Enjoys Dinner; Hears Good Program of Booster Talkers

The first annual stag of the Deerfield Men's club, the recently organized civic improvement association of Deerfield, was held at the Green Tree Inn last Thursday evening. Places were laid for ninety-seven, business affairs preventing the attendance of twelve other members, which would have brought the number above one hundred.

The theme of the evening was "Let's Plan Today for Deerfield's Future." J. L. Crane, zoning expert of Highland Park, was the first speaker of the evening. Among other things he stressed the point that Deerfield should not delay in the appointment of a planning and zoning commission. "This," he said, "would be a body to study the problems of development and lay out, for the approval of the village board, a scientific plan comprising zoning of business and residential sections, provision for park reservations and other means of beautifying the village. This is of exceptional importance because it has too often been the experience of other growing towns that after several years of development they have been forced to make expensive alterations that should have been provided for while the town was small." He further pointed out that only by such a commission can development be controlled and undesirable buildings or industries excluded, thus maintaining property values and the high standard of the community as a residence suburb.

Interesting Talk

Ben. Gage, chairman of the Illinois Relations committee and representative of the McGuire & Orr company, gave an interesting and instructive talk on "Deerfield as a Suburban Community." He looked forward to the expansion of the village along the lines similar to its North Shore neighbors and urged the necessity for every one of the present residents to appreciate the value of the Men's club as the most powerful agency that can contribute to the furtherance of this ambition.

In the words of Mr. Gage, "Deerfield will grow, but it will not grow properly without help. Before you can hope for the right kind of new people to come here to live, you must plan to provide the modern community necessities to take care of them. These are first, adequate sewers; second, a comprehensive plan for village development including zoning and building restrictions and provision for a future park system; third, a community building and a library. These are things that of course cannot be done all at once, but the important point is to begin part of them now and make plans to carry the others through as quickly as possible."

Value of Club

Harry Herb, of the Chicago Association of Commerce, talked on the subject, "The Value of the Men's club to Deerfield." In his opinion, as a worker for several years among civic organizations, the banding together of the men of a town for its betterment is the most effective way to handle public matters of interest to the people of the community. "Especially," he said, "in a town where newspapers, clubs and other means of getting the men together are lacking, this provides a clearing house for the exchange of ideas and is a place where the opinions of experts on vital questions can be presented. Every public spirited and forward looking man in Deerfield should get behind the Men's club and support it for all he is worth—it will help him have a better home in better community."

C. W. Boyle, president of the club, extended an invitation for new members, and announced that during the last week the membership passed the one hundred mark. Several enrollment cards signed by new members were presented to Secretary R. K. Hummel at the end of the meeting.

This club has been enthusiastically supported by the men of Deerfield ever since its organization, and William Galloway of the membership committee says that he confidently expects every man of Deerfield who is interested in village problems to have his name on the membership list in the near future.

EUGENE O'BRIEN IS POPULAR IN "STEVE"

Geo. M. Gatt's Production at Princess Theatre, Chicago. One of Best Showing

"Steve," George M. Gatt's production which appeared in Chicago three months ago for a limited engagement, and which proved so popular that the length of time of engagement has been extended twice, is still going strong, and many crowd the Princess theatre, Chicago, nightly to witness this most delightful performance.

Eugene O'Brien, the movie favorite, has become a greatly admired on the legitimate stage as in the movies. He plays the lead as Steve. He is supported by a remarkable cast of screen and stage stars, among them being Mrs. Whiffen, one of the oldest and most beloved actresses. She is seventy-eight years old and proves her ability as an actress in a remarkably sweet role, as the grandmother. Vivia Ogden, famous in "Way Down East," and in the movies as a town gossip, plays her selfsame inquisitive part, and Peggy Whiffen, as the jilted sweetheart of years past who believes that "revenge is sweet," add to the humor of the play.

The story is truly a love story. The action takes place on Pleasure Island off the coast of Maine. The theme is that of a moving picture company which has come to the island to film a picture, but while there "Steve" becomes interested in the island folk and their customs, and laws, and finds that their lives and environments make a far better plot than the one originally planned.

"Steve" is one of the cleanest, most humorous plays being staged in Chicago.

It is claimed that this government has failed to "usher in" peace, but anyway it has passed the contribution box.

Miss Theodora Troendle the Chicago pianist is spending the summer at 212 Cary Avenue, Rivina.

Formerly the woodlands were full of the footprints of game, but the principal tracks of wild life seem now to consist of the litter left by the picnic parties. Brother Bryan claims man didn't originate from the monkeys, but a little monkey blood would be quite helpful about now in climbing up after the high prices.
