START SERVICE AT NEW PLANT SOON

IS NEARING COMPLETION

Public Service Company's Plant At Waukegan To Be Ready For Operation In Two Months

Within two months it is expected the initial unit in the Public Service company's great new generating station at Waukegan will be contributing 25,000 k.w. of energy to the district supply. In fact some members of the engineering staff are nearly ready to name the date when the plant will be in operation. The boilers and condensers are at this writing being erected. The brick work is far advanced and the electric work to care for the output of the generator is well underway. The coal handling equipment, its ingenious layout, its conveyor belt 1,000 feet long, and its various interesting details, worth a story by itself, will, it is expected, be ready shortly after this number of the news in circulation.

Drying Out Fires. September 15 is set as the date for the starting of drying out fires in the boilers. Unit implies one and you know of course that the generating unit means it is one machine. But you get an idea of its bigness from the fact that nine cars are required to transport it from the manufactory.

There are two banks of transformers on the grounds. Their function is to reduce current transmitted from the present Waukegan station to the point necessary in actuating machinery used in erecting operations.

Progress at Joliet Plant. At the company's Joliet electric generating station where an additional 30,000 k.w. generator is being installed, great progress has been made.

Four boilers are required as an addition to the present battery. It is expected that some time in November the new generator will be in operation.

The company has received the necessary permit from the state authorizing the construction of the hydraulic station at Oroma Park included in the development plans of the year and work on it will start this fall.

EXTENT OF STATE ROAD WORK SHOWN

If Highways Finished Were Now In Straight Line Would Reach End to End

A fine paved road running from the most northwestern tip of the state, across Illinois to Cairo would roughly be the equivalent today of the road construction in the state in 1923, to date, the state department of public works, division of highways, announced a few days ago.

According to the statement, 550.04 miles of highways were built since the middle of May, when the road building season opened. The season lasts until the middle of May, being scarcely half over. Highway officials now feel that the goal of 1,000 miles of new roads set for the year may be passed.

Illustrating the magnitude of the state's highway construction the statement recorded the fact that on August 15, more than 2,500 men and 2,100 teams were busy building Illinois roads. There were being used 120 concrete mixers and hundreds of trucks.

Unfavorable weather has so far this year prevented the department from setting a weekly road construction mark of 50 miles, which has been the goal since the beginning of the season. During the week ending August 16, there were constructed 40.94 miles of roads.

INSURANCE NOW IS MORE IN DEMAND

Sales of Life Policies Greater In July Than In Previous Similar Months

Sales of ordinary life insurance during July were substantially greater this year than last, according to figures compiled by the Life Insurance Research Bureau of New York. Over $465,000,000 worth of new business was done in this country by 48 companies, which, in 1922, had over 80 per cent of the ordinary life insurance in force. This is a gain of 18 per cent over last year's sales. Judging by past experiences the bureau states that it is normal for the sales of life insurance to fall off about 10 per cent in July from the June sales. This year was no exception and the sales dropped from over $515,000,000 worth to $465,000,000, a decrease of 10 per cent.
