BOB-O-LINK COURSE IS TO BE EXPANDED

Purchase of 38 Acres on Southwest Provides for Extensive Improvement

Extensive improvements are in progress at Bob-O-Link Golf club which will make this popular Highland Park club one of the finest golf properties on the North Shore.

An additional tract of about 38 acres has been purchased adjoining the club property on the southwest, and the work of expanding the entire course is in progress under the supervision of the famous English firm of golf architects, Colt, McKenzie, & Allison, who built the splendid course for Briegate club, regarded as one of the best in this part of the country.

The Bob-O-Link course will remain one of 18 holes, but the new plans provide for "spreading out" the course, that is, providing more distance between holes. It is hoped to have the entire work completed by July 1, 1925.

LEGION CARD PARTY IS HUGE SUCCESS

The American Legion card party at Odd Fellows hall last Thursday evening brought out a very large gathering from all over the township.

The big lodge hall was filled to capacity, even the basement had to be commandeered to find room for the players. There was a prize for each table, and excellent coffee and an abundance of cake for refreshments. It was a real "get together" party, a credit to the local post of the Legion and particularly to the women of the Legion Auxiliary, who helped so materially in making the event a big house party.

Newly elected officers are: Mrs. C. P. Tibbetts, president; Mrs. Mary B. Lake, vice president; Mrs. Margaret E. Mercer, recording and corresponding secretary; Miss Stella Shea, treasurer.

There is a very substantial increase in membership this past year. Delegates from several unions will attend the state convention at Freeport, Oct. 23 to 26.

Respectfully submitted, Orpha B. Harding, Mary B. Lake, Jennie A. Miller, Committee.

WOMAN'S CLUB OPENS NEXT TUESDAY

as "Many Many Moons." This is a book which has been praised by educational leaders, and loved by the plain people; it has been highly esteemed by the foremost publications, and welcomed by the more popular ones. An unusually breezy, but genuine tribute, is that of Benjamin De Casseres:

"Here is rattling good poetry and beautiful song. Saret's work in me the old longings for Mother Earth, for the song of the wind without weather reports, a longing to wear mocassins instead of twenty-dollar paper ox-fords, to beat a tom-tom that can't play 'Dardenella'."

"If you are going to the mountains, pack this book into your traveling kit. It will put a spirit into every breeze, a god into every night murmur, and you will listen to the God of the Thunder Drums with an ear washed clean of rumors of war and rent-evictions. Come again, Lew Saret!"

Wilderness Poet Also Guiding long canoe expeditions through the great Quetico forest and over the famous Dawson route, Lew Saret has broken the silence of countless lakes and great forests from which spring the brooks and rivers which feed the waters of Hudson's Bay. Although these woods abound in big game, he has been content to hunt with his camera, using his rifle only to secure food and to protect life. Work in the woods, and as mountain guide, furnished the means for Lew Saret's education, and he has used it well. He is a graduate of Beloit college, and the Law School of the University of Illinois, and has taken post graduate work at Harvard and Michigan universities.

Writes Prize Poem In 1921, Lew Saret won the Levison prize for his poem: "The Box of God," a distinction which placed him among the foremost modern poets although, let it be understood, he has never written a line of free verse. He is today a U. S. Forest Ranger in the summer, professor in the Northwestern University School of Speech in winter, as well as an associate editor of "Poetry," contributor to The Atlantic Monthly, the North American Review, The Bookman, New York Post Literary Review, The American Boy, and other periodicals.

This brief account of Lew Saret's life, it is assumed, will be of interest to those who will hear him next Tuesday. It is stimulating, it is inspiring, to know the outlying facts in such a life, to hear how he has embraced every opportunity for achievement, after having made that opportunity by his own effort and perseverance.

Resolved, That we emphasize the importance of scientific temperance instruction for old and young, and we call upon the members of our organization to inform themselves so that they may be prepared to intelligently meet the opposing arguments,

Believing that the April primaries are of vital significance we urge our members to vote and to make every effort to induce others to vote.

Resolved, That we herewith express our appreciation of the entertainment given us by the Waukegan W. C. T. U. and the women of the First Baptist church; of the beautiful flowers which decorated the platform.
