KING OF HOBOES IS NOW USING OWN CAR

WIFE INSISTS ON CHANGE

Jeff Davis Who Has Ridden Rods Over Entire Country and in Foreign Lands, Takes To Automobile

What will the old boys say when they hear of this?

Jeff Davis, known for years as the "King of Hoboes," is now motoring instead of traveling "on the rods." Jeff, however, is not to blame altogether, as his new mode of traveling resulted from an edict from friend wife, and Jeff, being an obedient husband, listened and obeyed.

The former "knight of the road" who won his title as "King," drove into Kansas City via his motor, stepped out and issued the following statement to friends and others:

Wife Made Him Promise
"My wife made me promise not to ride the rods any more, and I have had to obey her orders, of course. The impulse to travel is irresistible, so I just appropriated the car which my family had been using and started out."

Jeff, however, still claims to be king of those who live the free-and-easy life. He won his fame many years ago, when he outdistanced all other competitors in "riding the rods." Jeff claims that even "A No. 1" who led the field of hoboes for many years, bowed before him and lost his title. The latter now has settled down and is a wealthy citizen.

Jeff has just rounded 40 years in his trip through life, but with his hat on, he looks several years younger. A bald head discloses just how far on life's journey he has traveled, but Jeff does not remove his hat for everyone.

Widely Traveled
In the many years that he has ridden berths on "side door Pullmans," Jeff has met presidents, kings, dukes, royalty and "royal flushes in many countries." He has traveled by all modes, the latest being his motor, which should give him the added title of "hobo de luxe."

There is little of interest on any section of the globe that Jeff has not seen, but still the urge for traveling and moving to new scenery has not lost its lustre for the "King."

His motor, while not in motion, has the appearance of a carnival stand, where you can buy pennants, souvenirs and the like. He has driven through many states, and in practically every city he has added a pennant, or has painted the name of the town on his car.

Varied in Speech
Jeff, through contact with royalty and society folk of many nations on the globe, speaks fluently and flawlessly. Then by his contact, too, with globe trotters and the common class, he can use the vernacular of the street with the equal fluency.

He can discuss almost any topic intelligently and offers a little advice to husbands, gaining his right to speak with authority from 23 years of marriage.

Jeff claims it is wrong to let your wife see too much of you, as that often makes wives get tired of husbands, and hence the large number of divorces.

"We still love each other, after our 23 years of married life," Jeff says in discussing his wife and their home life. "I see my wife about once a year. You see, she hasn't had time to become tired of me."

BEST FARM PRODUCT AT LIVESTOCK SHOW

Highest Achievements of Agriculture in America Will Be Exhibited

The highest achievement of the American farmer will be on display at the International Grain and Hay Show, held in connection with the International Livestock Exposition at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, the first week of December.

More than five thousand entries are expected by the college agronomists who have sole charge of the judging of the samples of grain and hay and who have determined the regions which are to contest for the twelve thousand dollars in premiums offered by the Chicago Board of Trade for the best exhibits.

This is the fifth annual Grain and Hay Show and not the least of the interest attached is the awarding of the Grand Champion Corn Cup, a massive silver trophy presented by the Chicago Board of Trade to the individual farmer who exhibits the best ten ears of corn.

So far in the annual competition the middle west corn belt has held the championship, but the contest is open to all sections of the country as well as Canada.

The Junior Corn Clubs, scattered over the country from Maine to Texas, this year are planning great things in their exhibits. The youngsters will compete for a Junior Championship Corn Cup, likewise the gift of the grain exchange, with which goes the honor of having raised the best ten ears of junior corn.

Glenn Phares, thirteen years old, of Shelbyville, Indiana, won the Junior trophy last and is in the competition again.

GIVES TALK UPON TEXTILE EXHIBITS

IS OF MARKED INTEREST

Curator of Decorative Arts in Illuminating Lecture at Institute Discusses This Subject

Linens from ancient Egypt and Peru, silks from the Near East, beautiful velvets from medieval Italy, France and Germany—these and many others were illustrated by Miss Bessie Bennett, curator of decorative arts at the Art Institute of Chicago, in her lecture on "Textiles; a study of fabrics in their relation to present industrial life," at Fullerton hall on November 13. The only country that was not represented was the United States, for, except for the products of the aboriginal Peruvians and Indians, America has sadly lacked a native textile art. With the greatest resources in the world, said Miss Bennett, the United States has shown little originality in weaving, and our best work has been simply in imitation of earlier forms. Since textiles play so large a part in our daily lives, the importance of developing a native textile art, truly characteristic of America, is quite apparent.

Origin and Development
In her slides Miss Bennett traced the origin and development of various familiar motifs in textiles and showed how some patterns, which we are accustomed to think of as distinctly modern, have existed since very early times and have persisted from age to age, finding modified expression in different countries. Some of the earliest and most interesting specimens of the weaving art that remain to us come from the graves of Egypt, where a Christian sect known as the Copts were skilled weavers. On one of the slides was shown a hunting jacket that had belonged to some noble Egypto-Roman and that gave an amusing and instructive insight into domestic life at the time. The large repeat-pattern showed a small house with a man and his wife standing within and with two birds hovering above the pointed roof. All through the ages textiles have supplemented historical record with details of the daily life of the people, and in some instances textiles are the only record we have of certain phases of their life and literature. No illustration remains to us, for example, of the hippogriff, a mythical animal of the middle ages, except the figures that appear on textiles. It is interesting and a little disconcerting to learn how many of our modern practices and fads we owe to the ancients. The dye, for instance, a year or so ago the last word in smartness, was known in Peru. The Copts in Egypt knew how to make their textiles attractive by introducing an open-work stripe.

HEAVY TRAFFIC ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY

More Than 13,000 Cars Pass In 36 Hours Given Point Near DeKalb

Those who have failed to realize that the Lincoln highway is carrying an immense traffic across Illinois should consider the figures resulting from a careful traffic check taken at the Chicago and Northwestern R. R. crossing on the Lincoln Way near DeKalb. For a period of 36 hours recently two men stationed at this crossing with mechanical counters checked the passing motor cars. The total during this time was 13,907 automobiles across the tracks. Estimating four persons to the car, this is a total of 55,628 and is an excellent argument for the elimination of the grade crossing at this point.
