FORGETTING OLD YEAR GRUDGES; BEGIN ANNUAL CUSTOM IN SEVERAL COUNTRIES Europe of Overlooking Petty Quarrels

One beautiful custom is said to prevail in certain parts of Europe. New Year's. Whatever quarrels or differences may have come between friends and relatives, it has become a custom to overlook such ill feelings, exchange visits, drop the past and make a new start.

Many troubles come because people entertain petty feelings. They are much of fancied slights that may be wholly imaginary. They are wrong motives, and many quarrels thereby come to embitter family relations and break up old friendships.

In nine cases out of 10 there is no good reason for such estrangements. People should be big enough to let go of them, and give their old friends a chance to re-establish themselves. Don't blame other people too sharply for unpleasant things they have done. You may have erred just as they have.

Let the bright New Year sentiment sweep these petty thoughts out of people's hearts.

The people who couldn't use money in December, owing to Christmas presents, may not be able to use now owing to January bills.

What many towns need is not so much new industries to make new money flow in, as home town efforts to keep the old money from flowing out.

Among the complaints of indignation are those of the voters who cast stomach the political platforms.
