"UNCLE JOE" WILL MAKE ONE SPEECH

AT DANVILLE ON MAY 16

Occasion of Conference of the Chambers of Commerce of Fifteen States; He Was 88 May 7

"Uncle Joe" Cannon is coming out of retirement long enough to make one speech. What the former czar of Congress intends to say no man knows except himself. He has confided to none, not even his cronies in Danville, among whom he settled down to enjoy life without politics upon his voluntary quitting of Congress more than a year ago.

Mr. Cannon's eighty-eighth birthday was on May 7, 1924. He was born May 7, 1836. Still chipper and alert, however, and still fond of cigars—although not the "long, black" variety cartoonists credit him with—Uncle Joe has some conclusions based on recent public happenings which his intimates say would make good reading if he chose to turn them loose.

Date Is May 16
Last year Danville and environs closed shops and schools and made a fête of Mr. Cannon's birthday. His chief public appearance this year will be May 16, in his home town. On that day representatives of fifteen counties, from Kankakee to Wabash, will assemble at Danville for a regional conference of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

One of the subjects to be discussed is the Chamber's project, the Illinois Products Exposition, to be held in Chicago in October as part of a campaign to advertise the state. Uncle Joe has accepted an invitation to speak. Sharing honors with him on the program will be Col. George T. Buckingham of Chicago, another favored son of Danville.

Whether Mr. Cannon will touch on international affairs and national politics or confine himself to the glories of Illinois is a question his friends will not attempt to answer.

What Will He Say?
"He probably doesn't know himself," said one. "But a lot of things have happened since Uncle Joe assured the world that this country was 'a Hell of a success' and I believe he has formed some interesting opinions. If he starts out on Vermilion county products and wades into the subject of Illinois products, I predict that he will be beyond the boundaries of the nation itself before he finishes. Parlor bolshevism is one topic we would like to hear him discuss.

"In presenting evidence of Vermilion county's superiority at the Illinois Products Exposition we naturally will not overlook Uncle Joe as one of our proudest products. His half-century of almost uninterrupted service in Congress is a record, but the man himself, in the perfect exercise of his faculties, is an asset to any community.

"His neighbors would like to display Uncle Joe at the American Exposition Palace in a crystal show case—with, of course, an appropriately orate spoke/stue—but he refuses to sit still. Since he left Congress flat on its back and started out to live his own life he's like a kid out of school."

COBB'S NEW BOOK PROVING POPULAR

"America Guyed Books" Latest Production of Famous Humorist

"Six states are feeling the pleasant shock of surprise at discovering that Irvin S. Cobb has 'written them up.' The series of Cobb's American Guyed Books, begun with little volumes on New York, Kansas, Indiana, Maine, North Carolina and Kentucky, is a candid statement of the advantages, disadvantages, merits, shortcomings, virtues, faults, excellences and defects of the various Units in these United States.

New York, says Cobb, was once the home of the Six Nations; and now look at it. General U. S. Grant, to the best of his knowledge, is the only permanent resident, and bootlegging is the principle industry.

The State of Kansas is a trifle shy on natural beauties—always excepting William Allen White and Vic Murdock's sunset hair—but it has plenty of moral Alps and moral Himalayas.

Indiana was formed by marrying the North and South. It is, after all, says Cobb, perhaps the noblest slice of this earthly cake. An intellectual Indiana rolls her own.

Great singers are made by contending with the names in the Maine geography. Cobb gives a vivid, intimate account of a hunting and fishing expedition he once made into the recognized wilds of Maine.

than a sleeping-car knowledge, Cobb says he doubts whether any State in recent years has made so remarkable a progress and betterment of its status and condition.

"From center to circumference, from crupper to hame, from pit to dome, a Kentuckian is all Kentuckian," says Cobb, and he ought to know.

TWO FAMOUS WOMEN SELECTED LEADERS

Frances Willard and Susan B. Anthony Named As Among Greatest of Sex

Frances E. Willard and Susan B. Anthony are unanimously selected as two of the four American women who have contributed most to the advancement of civilization in the last 100 years by women who are members of Northwestern University's faculty. Four faculty women at Northwestern were asked the following question:

In your opinion who are the four American women who have contributed most to the advancement of civilization the last 100 years?

This question was put because a few weeks ago an eastern newspaper canvassed male members of Northwestern's faculty for opinions as to the four greatest men of the last century. No mention was made of women and several members of Northwestern's faculty made genial but pointed comment to the effect: "Why narrow the field to men only; why not include women?" Thus one member of the faculty—a woman—to whom the eastern newspaper in a spirit of fun put the question, replied: "I should like to name the four greatest Americans of the last century but would be compelled to select at least three women—hence my reply will be unsatisfactory to you."

Thereupon, it was decided at Northwestern to canvass various women on the faculty as indicated.

HAS SPECIMENS OF CAMBODIA SCULPTURE

Art Institute Is Fortunate in Securing a Few of These Odd Articles

Few sculptures of Cambodia have been brought to occidental countries and the Art Institute is fortunate in having recently acquired some of the most important of these examples. Cambodia is a little-known country lying midway between French Indo-China, Siam and Laos, and Annam.

In the ninth century a period of great prosperity and splendor commenced there, the remains of which are still visible in the ruins of the great buildings within the enclosure of the former royal city of Angkor Thom and the nearby temple of Angkor Wat. The sculptures which have come to the Art Institute belonged originally in Angkor Thom.

Four of the pieces are Buddhist, which places them in the latter part of the great period of Cambodian history, probably of the twelfth century. Three of these pieces are heads, one a standing figure, and all were probably executed as memorials to dead princes or nobles. Their eyes are closed, they are smiling, and there is that expression of serenity and calm so characteristic of Oriental sculpture. Another head is identified as coming from one of the squatting giants that formed a balustrade over the bridge at Angkor Thom. A kneeling figure, rather clumsily executed, probably represents some noble personage bringing an offering. The torso of a female figure is probably of earlier origin than the heads mentioned above.

There is considerable variety in the treatment of these sculptures, but they have an unmistakably national character and point to the fact that this ancient nation must have had a well developed culture and power of artistic expression.
