URGING PURCHASE OF THE LINCOLN RELICS

FAMOUS OLDROYD DISPLAY
Noted Collection in Washington Highly Historical in Its Value and Congress May Buy It

Congress will be asked before adjournment to appropriate $50,000 for the purchase of the famous Oldroyd collection of Lincoln relics which now rests in the House in which Abraham Lincoln died opposite the old Ford Theatre in Washington.

The House Library committee has reported the bill for purchase of the collection favorably following an earnest plea by Representative Henry R. Rathbone of Illinois, who pointed out that Henry Ford has offered as much for the Oldroyd collection as the government is asked to pay, with the intention of taking it to Detroit.

Keep It in Washington
Representative Rathbone agrees with Capt. Osborne H. Oldroyd, owner of the collection and formerly a resident of Springfield, that the collection should be kept in Washington in its present location permanently, in order that the U. S. government may preserve it for posterity. Rathbone introduced the bill which was approved by the Library committee after inspecting the collection, which contains over 3,000 pieces, many of which were associated with Lincoln's early career in Illinois and his law practice at Springfield.

The bill was originally referred to the House Public Buildings committee, but was held up there by continued absence of the chairman, whereupon Representative Rathbone steered it past legislative shoals by securing action from the Library committee.

To Remodel House
After the purchase of the Oldroyd relics has been completed by the government, it is planned to remodel the house in which Lincoln died in order to permanently preserve it as the exhibition place of the famous relics.

Representative Rathbone recently delivered the dedicatory oration at the unveiling of the bronze tablets placed on the historic old house by the Columbia Historical Society. The building, which is now surrounded by shops and offices, has not been altered since the Emancipator died there on April 19, 1865.

FARMERS LIVING ON PRODUCE ARE AIDED

Those Able to Raise Most Food For Own Needs More Easily Pass Hard Times

The burden of the present agricultural depression has been eased for many farm families not only in Lake County, but through the state of Illinois, because they were able to supply the bulk of their own needs from their farms, according to H. C. H. Case, head of the farm organization and management department of the College of Agriculture, university of Illinois.

Through this opportunity to get their own living, farmers as a class have more chance in meeting a period of trying times successfully than almost any other group, he explained.

Many farmers in Lake County admit they would have had an extremely trying time of it had it not been that they were able to supply nearly all their needs from their farms.

In some cases the value of meat, dairy products, eggs, garden and orchard products used by farm families went up as high as $400 a year, according to records gathered by the college. The value of these items for each person in the family was as high as $147 in some cases. At retail prices these values would be practically doubled.

FOX LAKE TO HAVE BUS LINE IS PLAN

Company Incorporated to Operate It; Capital Stock Is $50,000

The Fox Lake Bus Line of Fox Lake was incorporated last week at Springfield to operate a motor bus line. The capital stock is $50,000, of which the following has been subscribed and paid in: J. L. Finkelshtein of Chicago, $10,000; E. S. Burd of Fox Lake, $5,900; and J. L. Walker of Joliet, $100.

The company announces a plan of transporting passengers and baggage between Waukegan and Fox Lake. Representatives of the company appeared before the Waukegan city commission some time ago and petitioned for the right to operate its busses over Grand avenue. The petition was placed on file but no action was taken.

The company recently filed an application with the Illinois Commerce Commission for a certificate of convenience and necessity to operate its busses over the Waukegan-Fox Lake route. The commission refused to act on the matter at that time because no incorporation papers had been taken out. Now that the concern has incorporated it is probable that a hearing will be had before the commission shortly on the matter of granting the certificate.
