NEW SIDELIGHTS ON LIFE OF ROOSEVELT

LETTERS BY FORMER AIDE

Col. Archie Butt's Epistles To Relatives While With T. R. Are Published Recently

Colonel Archie Butt, President Roosevelt's military aide and one of the most vivid and likable personalities that social Washington has known, kept a sparkling record of the social and political life of Washington in his daily letters to his mother and sister. These, gathered and edited by Lawrence F. Abbott in "The Letters of Archie Butt," (Doubleday Page & Company), are a spontaneous and unaffected portrayal of Theodore Roosevelt, and an entertaining record of one of the most significant administrations in our history.

At Oyster Bay One of the most charming glimpses of home life at Oyster Bay is written to his mother by Colonel Butt on his first visit to the President at his Long Island home.

"Dinner was at 8:00 and we hurried home to put on evening clothes. I had asked Mrs. Roosevelt if the President dressed for dinner and she said that since such was the custom but to wear anything I wanted, as the only rule they had at Oyster Bay was that they had no rules or regulations. I finally wore white trousers and white waistcoat with the dinner jacket and a black tie. He said it was a costume he liked more than any other for summer, and that he often wore it himself. He put Mrs. Winthrop on his right, and I sat on his left. There was no special formality, the only deference which was paid to the President was the fact that all dishes were handed to him first, then to Mrs. Roosevelt, and after that to the guest of honor, and so on.

"Miss Ethel was late in coming to dinner and everyone, including the president, rose. From the conversation which followed I learned that it had always been a rule in the household for the boys to rise when either their mother or father or their sister came to the table. In fact, Kermit said that since such was the custom the girls ought to make it a rule to be on time for their meals, and this remark started the Roosevelt ball rolling. The president said that he thought Ethel ought to try to be on time, too; that he preferred that no notice be taken of him when he came to his meals late, but that since Mrs. Roosevelt (with a deferential wave of the hand toward her) insisted upon this modicum of respect being paid to the president he always tried to be on time to his meals. Mrs. Roosevelt said that she did not insist upon the mark of respect being paid to the president but to their father, whereupon all laughed, and Ethel said she would try to be on time to all her meals except breakfast.

"I was very hungry and enjoyed my dinner, being helped twice to nearly everything. We had soup, fish, fried chicken, and corn on the cob, and jelly. There was nothing to drink but water. The president asked me if I would have something, but as it was not the custom I declined.

"We often have something," said the president, "so do not hesitate to take what you want. We are not the tipplers that our friends in Wall street would make us out, but don't mistake us for prohibitionists."

And again:

"It rained all the morning, but that did not prevent us from going in swimming and playing tennis. We started off with a good breakfast and everyone was keen for it. Peaches and cream, handed twice, and fried liver and bacon, and, strange as it may seem, hominy, served as we serve it in the South. Not big hominy, but grits, as they call it in the North.

"The president has his own coffee pot and 'slop bowl and cream pitcher and sugar. I think it is a complete set in itself. Mrs. Roosevelt says that it is next to impossible to get his coffee to suit him, and as he is a great coffee drinker she provided him with a service of his own, and if the coffee is not right he has no one to blame but himself. He drinks several cups at his breakfast and makes each one a matter of great formality. It is really interesting to see how much pleasure he gets out of it. He does not smoke, and the time when other men take to the weed he gets the papers and magazines and for about ten minutes is absorbed in them. He takes only the New York Herald and the New York Tribune. He knows he will not find anything in them to upset his indigestion.

"I could not stand the Evening Post or the Sun after a hearty meal," he said."

BROADCASTING IN 1879

When the American Institute Fair was held in New York in 1879, the newly invented telephone was one of the greatest attractions. Everyone was anxious to hear it, so twenty telephones were connected on one line and Charles F. Kelleher, who was among the first operators in New York, sang to listeners for about two hours every night.

During their divorce trial at Tulsa, Okla., I. H. Dawson smiled at his wife. She returned the smile and they made up.

DAIRYMEN'S MEET, CARBONDALE, JAN. 20

Annual Session of State Association To Be Held There Next Year

The Illinois State Dairymen's association will hold its 51st annual convention at Carbondale on January 20, 21, and 22 according to announcement made to the press by Stillman J. Stanard, vice-president of the State Dairymen's association and superintendent of dairy husbandry, state of Illinois.

The first day will be devoted to a cattle show in the Southern Illinois state normal pavilion and a contest in cattle judging between the agricultural students of Southern Illinois schools will be an interesting feature. Attractive premiums are offered and much interest is already being shown in both the cattle judging and the cattle show.

The night of the first day will be given to a lecture by a dairy authority of national reputation. Lectures on timely dairy topics will be the features of the programs on January 21 and 22. These will be held in the Southern Illinois Normal auditorium. One of the outstanding events of the entire convention will be the annual banquet the night of January 21, at which time farmers, business men and commercial concern representatives will meet for a good time around the banquet table. It is expected that the dairy farmers and dairy enthusiasts of all Egypt, as well as many from up-state will gather at this meeting.

Robert Hall, in prison in Texas for murder since last May, was permitted to visit his wife, who had given birth to triplets, one of whom had died.
