INTEREST IN ART BROADENS OUTLOOK

IS REVELATION OF BEAUTY

Chicago Business Man Tells How Study of Pictures Develops Appreciation of Beautiful in Nature

Here is a demonstration of how the grip of a really worthwhile thing gets hold of a man and how his view of life is broadened and his enjoyment thereof greatly increased. A prominent Chicago business man writes as follows to an artist friend:

"I am glad of an opportunity to write you again because of the interest I have taken in pictures since the time that you brought several of Mr. Wendt's back to Chicago with you some two or three years ago. I was present in your office when you were discussing those pictures with Schulze, who had called to see them, and I became very much interested in the conversation. I had a kind of hazy notion that if you gentlemen got as much pleasure out of pictures as your conversation indicated, that I was overlooking something in life. So the next time I went to the Art Institute I took a good look, and I did the same thing at the club, and repeated it, and the more I looked, the more I saw or thought I saw in the pictures. Then I picked up a book we had by Van Dyke entitled "How to Judge a Picture," and read it, and since then I have had four other of his books and one by Birge Harrison, and am a regular glutton on the subject.

Revelation of Beauty
 "But the thing that has astonished me during the short time I have been studying the subject is the revelation of the beautiful things I have been missing in life, not in pictures, but in nature. When I sit out now I see the deep blue of the sky and the lighter blue near the horizon and the beautiful blending of the two. When I look at a tree I see lights and shades and shadows. I see shimmering effects on the water and on the landscape and things in the sky that I never knew were there. And this applies to the night as well as to the day. Even a row of old yellow stumps that I wouldn't so much as glance at before, are beautiful because they are rugged and strong, perfection of their kind, and because I would take a ton of dynamite to blow out their everlasting roots. When I look at a man I see the lights and shades of his face, or hand, that I never saw before. Actually I never saw them before, and I have been looking at people for forty-six years.

Greatest Things in Art
 "I assume, therefore, that the greatest thing in art is not pictures, they are secondary, but it is the sleeping thing that they awaken in people, that causes them to get 'hep' to themselves and get out and enjoy nature. And how free and easy and inexpensive a pleasure it is, just looking, if people will only learn from the artists and from their pictures how to do it. For instance on my previous visits to California I thought I enjoyed the scenery, the desert, the mountains, etc., but now I know that on my previous visits I didn't see anything compared with what I will see after studying your pictures and others.

"I hope you will pardon me or inflicting all this upon you, but I have become quite enthusiastic, and will be glad if you will suggest some helpful reading upon the subject."

TWO DIE AS RESULT OF ACCIDENTS HERE

fracture of the skull, a broken leg, and other injuries. Death followed in about two hours.

The gateman at the crossing testified at the inquest that he had called to Kelly to warn him of the approach of the car and tried to stop him, but he was out of reach. The gates did not extend entirely across the sidewalk, it was reported.

Inquest Verdict
 The verdict of the jury was that death was accidental, in the manner and at the time described; no blame was attached to the car crew or the company, but it was recommended that arms extending across the walks be added to the gates.

Mr. Kelly, as near as can be learned was about 50 years of age and had been employed about 23 years by the Loderback family, where his position was that of gardener. It was stated by a member of the family yesterday that he was an efficient and faithful employe. That he had many warm friends in Highland Park was evidenced by the number who interested themselves in his condition following the accident.

Funeral Today
 He had no relatives here and funeral arrangements were deferred until the arrival of a brother yesterday from Pennsylvania, after which it was announced that the service would be held Thursday morning at St. James' Church, Highland, and that burial would be at Joliet, Ill.

Child Is Victim
 The death of the little Curley boy resulted from injuries received Monday afternoon, when he jumped from the rear of a wagon and stepped directly in front of an automobile driven by Miss Helen Bock, daughter of George Bock of Highland Park. The car was moving at a moderate rate of speed, it was stated at the inquest held Tuesday, and the driver was held blameless in the premises by the coroner's jury.

The lad was riding on the wagon on his way home from school and when opposite his home, according to the testimony, he left the vehicle and started across the street, directly in front of the auto, which he evidently had not noticed. Miss Bock had no time to stop before the boy was struck. He was hurried to the Highland Park hospital, where everything possible was done to save his life. He died at 4:30 Tuesday morning from injuries to the head, examination indicating a brain hemorrhage.

Burial Today
 The funeral was held at 9:30 this morning, at St. James' Church, Highland, and burial was in the Lake Forest cemetery.

GREEK CHURCH HAS DECORATED JACKIE

RECOGNITION OF CRUSADE

Golden Cross of Order of Jerusalem Awarded Child Film Actor Because of His Aid in Near East

A cablegram received today from Athens by the Near East Relief states that the Greek Orthodox church has awarded the golden cross of the Order of Jerusalem to Jackie Coogan in recognition of his humanitarian services for the refugee orphans of the Near East.

This cross is one of the most highly prized ecclesiastical decorations in the world. It is in the form of a locket, containing inside a small silver of wood, a fragment of what is believed by the Greek church to be an actual piece of the original cross on which Christ was crucified.

Explanation Given
 In explanation of the action of the Greek church, the Near East Relief today issued the following statement:

"The visit of the American child film star to the Near East aroused more interest overseas than any American humanitarian movement in years. Throughout Greece and the Holy Land, the news was published in every conceivable form that Jackie had himself, in a nation-wide children's campaign, raised a million dollars worth of food and clothing. His action was heralded as a modern children's crusade and was compared by press and public to the great children's crusade of the Middle Ages under the leadership of Stephen, the shepherd boy.

Leading Part
 "Government officials and church dignitaries took a leading part in the reception of Jackie. Ten thousand persons met him on his arrival at Piraeus, and official visits were exchanged between the boy and the highest personages of church and state. All the school children of Athens were given a special holiday in order to assemble on the Acropolis to witness the award to the young visitor of the highest civilian honor in the gift of the Greek government, the Cross of George the First.

"The visit of Jackie Coogan to the Near East has typified the heart of America to these governments and to their churches, schools and general public. It has been regarded by them as a symbol of the philanthropic interest of America in their great refugee problems. It has shown them in a graphic and convincing way, that the charitable assistance which America has given them, is not a political thing with a background of imperialistic ambitions, but a sympathetic gesture representing the heart of the American people.

"The Golden Cross of Jerusalem is intended by the Greek church as a gift and a token of appreciation, not merely to young Coogan, but through him to all the children of America who made his crusade possible."

REPORT 3 ROBBERIES OVER THE WEEK END

Offices of Physician and Dentist and One Residence Are Burglarized

Three robberies were reported in Highland Park over the week end, one of a physician's office, one of a dentist's, and the other in a residence. A microscope valued at $200 was taken from the office of Dr. G. Q. Grady sometime between Saturday evening and Monday morning. Entrance evidently was gained by forcing the lock of the door. Two other microscopes of greater value and many hundreds of dollars worth of surgical instruments were not removed by the thief.

A bottle of dentist's gold was taken during the same time from the office of Dr. C. V. Nichols.

The residence robbed was that of Edward A. Hintz, 430 Oakwood avenue. Entrance was obtained by means of a ladder standing where kitchen windows had been cleaned recently. Several small articles of jewelry were taken, the police were told.

THIEVES PLUNDER SUMMER COTTAGE

House at Long Lake Occupied By Sanborn and Brown Families Robbed

Charles Sanborn and William J. Brown, both of Highland Park, are mourning the loss of an extensive hunting and fishing outfit stolen from their double house at Long Lake one day last week. The two families spent the warm season at their summer home there and returned, expecting to bring back their belongings by installment.

When they returned the other day they discovered that thieves had smashed a window and ransacked the house, taking a number of valuable accessories, including a fishing tackle box containing a large and varied assortment of fisherman's accessories, also four steel fishing rods, three reels, a battery, a new motor for power boat, with all its accessories, shotgun and revolver shells, complete kit of tools for the new motor, a shotgun and gun case, bedding and pillows and other articles.

The loss is a serious one estimated at from $300 to $500 and effort is being made to recover the loot, but so far without success. This is the fourteenth or fifteenth burglary which has occurred in the Long Lake colony this fall, it is reported.
