Onward the world continues to wag its way—bright, shining and full of interesting things. What? Does some one raise a regretful eyebrow? Don't you find the world full of interesting things? Ah, but that is because you haven't been with me in the city, today. Come—let me tell you about what I have seen.

Winter Cruises

There are, for instance winter cruises through the West Indies and Mediterranean. How does that strike the ear in these days of gray skies and slippery sidewalks, sharp winds, cold sleet and cinders in the eye? Consider palm trees and tropical oceans—and fish that slip out of still waters with a lecherous flip. Consider Gibraltar under a sleepy moon, or Morro Castle in the glow of a setting sun. For the winter season that has just begun the White Star Line has planned a series of alluring cruises. One, through the West Indies—a whole month out of New York—touching here, touching there, at Nassau, at Martinique, at Port-of-Spain on the coast of South America, at Colon so that one may glimpse the Canal. As for the Mediterranean cruise, it includes Madeira, Gibraltar, Egypt—but why go on? Booking for either should be taken before January first. Particulars may be had at the White Star Line office in the city.

Furs—A Sale

But perhaps you have determined to spend the winter in the north. Perhaps—who knows—you even like the winter in the north. In which case, of course, your mind is wandering—not to winter cruises, at all, but to furs. Well, I can tell you something interesting about furs, too. At Henning's—all fur coats have been reduced in price before the holiday season, in order that you may take advantage of the very best possible prices now, and have your new coat to wear for the coming festivities. That's a good idea, isn't it? Henning's furs, of course, are too well known to need recommendation. But you will be interested to hear that the very best things shown there this year are dyed ermine with deep, silky fox collars and cuffs, and astrakans—also with trimming of deep fox. The prices, as I've said, you'll find much reduced. Henning's address is 108 N. State St.—the second floor of the Stewart building, just across from Field's.

Handsomely Fitted Suit-Cases

Then there are fitted suit-cases, from Taylor's—these, of course, especially nice as Christmas gifts. Ah, very handsome they are too, these suit-cases, and just the thing to charm a young college girl home for vacation, or—perhaps—her mother bound presently for the south. They come in a variety of excellent leathers and linings, and the fittings are the sort of thing one needs on a trip. Such a comfort it is, isn't it, not to have one's toilet articles rattling around in the bottom of one's bag! Really, you must not fail to see these good-looking suitcases, at Taylor's, 28 E. Randolph st. Prices range from $30—upward.

Dresses for Stout Women

Not extraordinarily large! That's not the idea at all! But women whom ordinary size 38 or size 40 dress will not fit comfortably. Lane Bryant, the well known Lane Bryant whose handsome store is found at the corner of Wabash and Washington Streets, makes a specialty of fitting women of that sort. Here you will find the very most elegant of costumes, New York or Paris models. And if you have had trouble in being fitted elsewhere you'll find you can be fitted here. Sizes, of course, run up to 56.

Senia—The Russian Milliner

Yes indeed,—a Russian milliner! Senia, whose smart establishment looks out over the bounding deep (poetical term for Lake Michigan), from the eighth floor of the Lake View building, 116 S. Michigan ave., sends forth little waves of joy and personality into the city in the form of hats—Russian hats—such alluring hats! Haven't you ever seen her shop? You must! Her hats are very becoming. Flattering, indeed; and just now she's having a sale, and everything is reduced to about half price. Besides you need another winter hat. You know you do.

Men's Sweaters—At the Hub

Quite the largest and best men's clothing store in the city is The Hub, state and Jackson blvd. And to me the most interesting thing in this men's shop, just now, is the sweater section. Gracious!—such barbaric colors you never saw! And such lovely patterns! Almost any man might become decorative the moment he put on one of these sweaters, wherefore they make ideal Christmas gifts since all men, big and small—the bigger the better—adore them. They long to be decorative you see—poor dears, as why shouldn't they? Prices of these imported sweaters range from $6 to $20.

There are also leather jerkins with knitted collars and cuffs and bottom—charming garments, these—at $15. And on the first floor at the Hub you will find men's handkerchiefs, imported, with hand embroidered initials at 50 cents to $2.

And Noie—The Body Glove

What is a body glove? Why it is a sort of a corset—yet not a corset. It is the softest garment ever made for reducing. It is the invention of a graduate nurse, and it moulds and slenderizes the figure, yet allows it to move freely—and breathe. Doesn't that sound interesting? Of course it does. For the body glove is interesting—a sort of revelation, in fact. Why not go to see it? Prices are very moderate. The address is Room 332 in the Republic building, at Adams and State streets. A graduate nurse will fit you, if you like.

DANCING LESSONS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Dancing lessons for the freshmen and new students at the high school were begun last Monday under the direction of Miss Pocock from the Bournique School of Dancing in Chicago. The session period was divided into two parts allowing half of the crowd to be spectators for a part of the period. The freshmen learned readily the dancing positions and steps of the waltz and fox trot, but disliked the idea of the spectators in the balcony awaiting their turn to dance.

These lessons will be continued for several weeks. The older students will be taught after the freshmen have been taken care of.

THE REAL REDUCER

Competition did not reduce the rates for electric light and power. Improvement and development in the industry did it. The change from carbon lamps to Mazda lamps saves 2,000,000 tons of coal annually, or about $150,000,000. Here is another item: Twenty years ago a 10-horse-power electric motor weighed 1,100 pounds and cost about $350. Today, a motor of the same power weighs 270 pounds and costs approximately $225.

ANGLO-AMERICAN AGREEMENT

The British dominions that look out on the Pacific feel that in Washington there is an instinctive understanding of their difficulties, which, when they come to London, they have to explain laboriously in Downing Street.

Thus, Sir Auckland Geddes, former British ambassador to the United States, warns his people that when the dominions find no satisfactory understanding in London "they are apt to look to Washington, and Washington, with inviting eyes, will look back at them."

What does he mean? Simply that the British dominions in the Pacific, where lurks the threatening shadow of imperialism and militaristic Japan, find a greater common interest with the people of the United States than with those of the British Isles. Japan, if wisely governed, will make no gesture to force an alliance between this common interest. To make a false step now would mean British and American domination of the Pacific, and as British we include the dominions, whose borders are on the Pacific.

The American people, in future, must keep abreast of modern international politics. Already there is talk of an Anglo-American supremacy, and it has been truly said by a modern essayist, in discussing this topic, that, if the Americans and British decide to unite in doing any great thing, it can be done.

SUPPORT THE HOSPITAL

There should be no necessity for appeal to the public for support for so worthy a cause as the Highland Park hospital. Its value to the community is beyond estimate in lives saved and suffering relieved. No community of the size of Highland Park has better buildings nor more complete equipment for hospital purposes, and that these have been provided and paid for is due largely to the liberality of a few hundreds of our citizens. There remains, however, to provide for the maintenance of the institution over and above the annual deficit annually in operation.

Every hospital must take care of a percentage of charity cases, and the local hospital is no exception. Because of this and the fact that the average number of patients daily is not quite large enough to afford revenues sufficient to overcome the deficit caused by the non-paying, there is a shortage annually. In a few years, perhaps, with increase of population, this difficulty may to a large extent be surmounted. But the emergency is now, and it would seem that the fine thing to do would be to place the hospital on a financial basis which would eliminate this annual worry about deficits. A reasonable endowment would take care of any possible difference between income and expenditures, and this should be provided. The hospital association should not be hardened year after year with this problem. Why not face this problem now and solve it by putting the hospital beyond reasonable danger of future deficits?

BLOCKING PROGRESS

When the country rolled up its phenomenal plurality for President Coolidge in November it indicated how strongly the people favor the elimination of all unnecessary expense at Washington in order that the president's plan for further tax reduction might proceed. That program should be carried out with the least possible delay, and it is expected that the congressmen elected in November will back up the president in this plan. But they are not yet in office, and in the meantime the present hold-over congress may block the president's plans and defeat the will of the people in this regard.

An illustration of this is seen in the recent action of the house in restoring to an appropriation bill a number of offices and salaries which it was planned to abolish under the recommendations of the committee and the advice of the cabinet member in charge of that department on the ground that a smaller force can now very easily take care of the business involved. But it seems that a majority of the representatives would rather protect the jobs of unnecessary office holders than save the people's money.

This sort of thing indicates a disposition on the part of these "lame duck" congressmen which threatens at least a year's delay in the whole tax-reduction program of the administration. And it is a good basis for further argument in favor of making some provision whereby congressmen voted out of office may not be able longer to control legislation. That they have been defeated for re-election is evidence of the country's lack of faith in them. Nobody wants their hang-over influence to handicap good government.
