EXPORTING ANIMAL PRODUCTS PAYING $300,000,000 INCOME IN 1923

Very Extensive Study of Marketing of The Meat Products Abroad Has Been Made

"Isn't business amounting to $207,907,556 in nine months very well worth while a strenuous effort to get and keep?" asked Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, recently in discussing exports of animal products. "That is the amount that the exportation of meat and meat products such as lard and other animal and fish oils and fats has brought into the meat industry of the United States during the nine months of 1924 ending September 30th. In 1923, the exports of those products amounted to over $300,000,000. About ten per cent of all meat and meat products of this country goes into foreign markets.

"To help the producers and packers to sustain and expand their foreign markets, the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce recently sent a man overseas to make an extensive study of the marketing of American meat products abroad and of the competition which is encountered. The results of this study are now being compiled for dissemination to the industry, and the special agent who investigated conditions has been able to offer some valuable suggestions to the packers.

"The exporters of meat products encounter keen competition, particularly from Denmark, Ireland, and Canada, and indirectly from Australia and Argentina. Over fifty per cent of the bacon used in Great Britain comes from Denmark. The bureau has inaugurated a cable service giving weekly reports of receipts of meats to Great Britain. Since the packers consider that this service has a very definite dollar and cents value to them, the plan is to expand it by giving weekly reports of receipts of all meat products at the principal ports of Great Britain, including shipments from other competing European countries, as well as from Australia and Argentina.

"The bureau also has placed a trade commissioner at Hamburg, Germany, to report exclusively on the economic and business conditions there as they apply to markets for American meats abroad. It is the intention to have this trade commissioner extend his work so as to cover the whole of Europe, as occasion demands. "The meat industry is the largest single industry in this country. Moreover, upon the sale of meat and its by-products depends the disposal of the largest crop in the United States—that of corn, a large proportion of which is fed to livestock. When two such important products of this country are concerned, certainly every effort should be made to encourage peak production and aid in keeping an even flow of operation in the meat industry."

WANT TO COLLECT HOSPITAL ACCOUNTS

County Board Files Suits To Clear 'Up Expenses of Accident Victims

"They've got money to buy moonshine and to 'bust' their automobiles and anatomies, but none to pay their ambulance and hospital bills," declared Supervisor Ray Paddock of Wauconda, recently at a meeting of the county board, which discussed in a spirited manner the causes for the rapidly increasing costs which the county is compelled to bear in connection with the care of transients, and even local automobilists in accidents.

The bills showed that large ambulance and hospital bills are incurred through these accidents, and the victims promise to pay but frequently leave the county hospital "holding the sack" for large bills.

Dr. Charles Lieber, superintendent of the county hospital, appeared before the board and declared that in practically all these cases the victims or relatives promise to pay, but they seldom have any ready cash, and in case the automobiles are not so badly smashed that they are of value, some friend comes along in a day or two and takes the machine out of the garages, long before the patients are able to leave the hospital. The victims must be cared for in the name of humanity, and if they fail to pay any attention to bills sent them for ambulance, hospital services and supplies, the county has to pay them. In one recent case another doctor worked for several hours with the county physician in patching up a motorist, and the bill for the other doctor also had to be paid by the county, although the victim is able to pay, if he would.

The board voted to turn over all such claims to the states attorney, who is to start legal action against all who are able to pay.

Such matters in future are also to be reported to the supervisor in the townships where the accidents occur, and he is to make an investigation to determine if the victims are able to pay. Recently Supervisor M. J. Achen had a Chicago case in which it was learned that the victim would be a county charge. He got into immediate communication with the Cook county agent, who promptly took the patient to that county. In this way Lake county was saved considerable expense.

Supervisor Paddock declared expenses incident to accidents of this kind cost the county from $2,000 to $5,000 annually.

FICTION ANARCHY IS DUE TO FEAR

Distrust of Technique and the Danger of Being Unoriginal Causes

"The distrust of technique and the fear of being unoriginal—both symptoms of a certain lack of creative abundance—are in truth leading to pure anarchy in fiction," asserts Mrs. Edith Wharton in her essay "The Writing of Fiction," in the Christmas number of Scribner's Magazine, "and one is almost tempted to say that in certain schools formlessness is now regarded as the first condition of form. Not long ago I heard a man of letters declare that Desostoevsky was superior to Tolstoy because his mind was 'more chaotic,' and he could therefore render more 'truthfully' the chaos of the Russian mind in general; though how chaos can be apprehended and defined by a mind immersed in it, the speaker did not make clear.

"The assertion, of course, was the result of confusing imaginative emotivity with its objective rendering. What the speaker meant was that the novelist who would create a given group of people or portray special social conditions must be able to identify himself with them; which is rather a long way of saying that an artist must have imagination. The chief difference between the merely sympathetic and the creative imagination is that the latter is two-sided, and combines with the power of penetrating into other minds that of standing far enough aloof from them to see beyond, and relate them to the whole stuff of life out of which they but partially emerge. Such an all-round view can be obtained only by mounting to a height; and that height, in art, is proportioned to the artist's power of detaching one part of his imagination from the particular problem in which the rest is steeped."

Some people pay off their debts on studied in modern schools are wrong, and the pupils generally agree with them.

In France the reds are being arrested, while in this country many of them are simply being rested at their loafing houses.

Claimed that most women will bob their hair before long, and the barbers do not seem to be doing a thing to stem the tide of this movement.
