PUBLIC LIBRARY

Not only will the children of Highland Park be interested to know, but also the adults of the town, that a new fairyland is in the process of being constructed in their midst. What was once the auditorium of the Public Library is being made over into a children's reading room, thus both relieving the crowded condition of the main floor and giving the children twice the space they had before. We hope to be ready to house "the little fairies in your home" by next fall. By that time the fairy wand will have waved over the library, and presto! "Alice in Wonderland" will be in a real wonderland with new and shining book-shelves and freshly decorated walls. "Peter Rabbit" will no longer have to be shelved beside "Peter Ibbetson," nor will the "Youth's Companion" have to be crowded up against the austere "Yale Review."

The following books were added to the library during the month of March:

Hall, Harry—Real estate manual.
