The United States government has extended its endorsement of the Woman's World Fair held April 18-25 in the American Exposition Palace, and its cooperation, from the radio speech the President will make and the official opening by Mrs. Coolidge, to the exhibitors in the fair.

At the suggestion of the President, departments of the government where women occupy important positions will be represented at the fair and six booths have been set aside for their use. The Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor will show a model factory, the original model of which is a part of the permanent health exhibit of the Smithsonian Institute.

Exhibits in six miniature theatres will illustrate standards of hours, wages, and working conditions for women. The subjects to be illustrated are the living wage and all the items it must cover; and the eight-hour day with all the activities that should go to fill up the twenty-four hours of a woman's day.
