

MOTOR TROUBLES MOSTLY ELECTRIC

Thorough Inspection of This System in Car Advised Before Touring

A recent checkup of the calls received by the mechanical first aid department of the Chicago Motor club shows that about seventy-five per cent of all operating troubles of the motorist may be traced to the electrical system.

The starter and the generator should be inspected for loose or worn bearings, and it will probably be found that they are in need of oil.

Battery leads should be inspected for worn places in the insulation—new cables should be installed if necessary or perhaps it may suffice to tape the worn places.

Battery connections should be removed and corrosions scraped off and the posts should be well greased with vaseline.

Spark plugs should be taken out and cleaned, and the contact points adjusted for correct distance.

A thin film placed between the points is generally used as a measure of distance.

NEW BUILDING FOR TELEPHONE COMPANY

IS TWENTY-NINE STORIES Immense Structure Is Being Erected in New York to House Equipment of Magnitude

Housing under its roof more telephone equipment than is found in some entire European countries, and sufficient to supply the service needs of a city the size of Cincinnati, the new building of the New York Telephone company which is now being constructed will contain six local central offices to serve downtown Manhattan and one central office for toll traffic, making it the largest and most complex switching exchange center in the world.

Twenty-Nine Stories The new building will be 29 stories in height and will occupy the entire block on the lower west side of Manhattan, bounded by West, Barclay, Washington and Vesey streets.

While the erection of a sky-scraper in the downtown district of New York causes little comment nowadays in that area of giant structures and wonder buildings, this new telephone building will differ from its city neighbors in many respects, for while other buildings in Manhattan's business section will be veritable beehives of industry for eight hours a day, this structure will be a center through which social and business communication will pulse unceasingly.

Miles of Wire Along its walls, and through its floors will course probably the greatest quantity of telephone wires ever assembled in one building.

From this modern clearing house of conversation many of these individual wires will spread, fan-like, as trunk lines to scores of other telephone central offices in greater New York, while the remainder will branch out and find their terminals in the 120,000 telephones which the central offices will serve direct.
