Radio Times

This is a new column in the Press which we hope that the readers will find interesting. A word of criticism whether encouraging or otherwise will be appreciated.

Arctic Radio

Radio is again to be a factor in the MacMillan expedition. When the little schooner Bowdoin left Wisasset, Maine, there was a very complete radio outfit on board. Since Captain MacMillan's last trip, radio engineers have come to recognize the efficacy of short waves—waves much below those on which we listen to broadcasted entertainment.

The transmitter was donated by the Zenith corporation as was the receiver. These outfits show the latest application of engineering principles. John L. Reinartz of the Reinartz circuit fame is the operator.

Glass Panels

Glass panels are coming into vogue for receiving sets. The drilling itself is not nearly as hard as it looks and merely requires great care. An ordinary machine drill is used. When drilling place a coin under the glass at the point of pressure. When the hole is cut half-way through, turn the panel over and finish the hole from the other side.

Turpentine should be put on the point of the drill and brushed on the glass every few minutes during the drilling.

Silent Night

What do the residents of Highland Park and vicinity think of Silent Night? Silent Night was instituted in Chicago, and most of us enjoyed it, but since some of the stations have become residents of the suburbs, silent night means only WHT or WTAS. Silent Night in this vicinity has now become WHT night. Let us hear your opinion on this question.

Not as easy as it looks

She does it—but it's not a bit easy. In fact, it's a lot too much for her to be doing. And if she'd just let one of our family services take these washday implements off her hands, she'd have her mind, time and energy free for the things that, as a wife and mother, she alone is able to do.

TELLS HOW PRINCES GROW OLD

Arthur Brisbane, in his "Today" column in the Daily Herald and Examiner—the column which has been called "a university education in itself"—tells "how princes grow old." He says, in part:

"Specks of news make up the world's history, as the ticks of the second hand makes up eternity.

"The Prince of Wales, celebrating his thirty-first birthday far-off South Africa, danced until late. Princes mature and dance later than they used to. Alexander the Great, the youth that all things but himself subdued, was making the world dance when he was thirty-one. When Napoleon Bonaparte was two years younger than the Prince of Wales is now he had dried the tears of his friend, the pretty young widow, Josephine Beauharnais, by beating three Austrian armies in succession and compelling the brave General Wormser to take to his heels and hide in Mantua.

"When Henry the Eighth—was Prince of Wales and only six years old, he was engaged to Catherine of Aragon, six years older than himself. When he was 21, he was the military partner of the Pope and the Spanish Emperor, in league against the King of France. At 22 he had crossed the channel and defeated the French Army.

"The young Prince put flowers on the grave of Oom Paau Krueger. It's easy to be nice to your enemy, beaten and dead. But there is no knowing how old Krueger would feel about the wreath on his grave. It might make him writhe.

"Krueger, incidentally, should be one of the lawyers for the prosecution in the famous Bryan-Darwin monkey case in Tennessee.

"A traveler sent in his name to Krueger, saying he was on his way around the world. The pious ruler of the Transvaal refused to see him, saying that if the traveler had read the Bible he would know the world wasn't round and therefore he couldn't travel around it."

VACATION TIME

July and August are the most popular vacation months. According to theory, everyone should have a vacation. Many do not get it at this time of year, or perhaps not at all. Farmers are extremely busy then, but they have time later when they can take a rest. Mechanics may be expected to work continuously when business is good, but there may be idle times enough in their occupation so they are glad to work when there is work.

The human machine was not meant to work without interruption. It is claimed that shoes will wear better if you do not wear one pair right along every day. And so people tend to get stuck if their work continues without interruption.

People get into a rut if they attempt to work 52 weeks in the year, and they need some variation to put zest into them. However, those that drive themselves too hard having a good vacation during those vacations, may return so tired that the change does not benefited them.
