NUMBER 28

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

That the Public Library has been a success, and none would question the fact that it has been a good investment for the taxpayer, is due to a composite effort: not only that of the Board of Directors who are directly responsible for its administration, but the splendid response of the community itself by its spirit of appreciation of what a power books and book service can be in a community.

The Public Library springs from a root deeply implanted in the spirit of Highland Park—the same root from which have sprung our schools and churches. Even if no tangible relationship were traceable, the common spirit and purpose would be manifest.

The library stands secure in an established place in the confidence and pride of the community, and with the new Children's room and a new assortment of juvenile books, we hope that the library will occupy a large place in the hearts of the children of Highland Park. —M. H. C.

CHEAPER AUTOMOBILES

Recent price cuts by leading automobile makers have given new interest to the question of whether the smaller manufacturers can survive in the face of keener competition.

Since the automobile became a commercial proposition about 1900, more than 1,000 companies have engaged in its production, yet by 1924 only 74 of these remained in business. Of those that survived, 28 companies produced 96 per cent of the total output.

Quantity production, which has been the greatest single factor in Ford's phenomenal success, now appears to be the goal of all the larger companies.

Many small automobile companies have really been merely assembling concerns, buying all or most of their parts from other manufacturers. Ordinarily this would make their costs greater than those of firms manufacturing their own parts. This fact, it is predicted, will eventually mean the extinction of the smaller companies.

From the standpoint of the public, the increasing fierce competition now developing promises substantial benefits through further reductions in automobile prices.

Ever See the Captain Scrub the Decks?

The decks of a battleship are always spotless—but you never see the captain scrubbing them. He saves his time for the important duties of guiding the ship. We'll leave it to you whether you're captain or first mate of the family vessel. But in either case, you're too important an officer to tend to the scrubbing and rubbing of washday.

Especially when our famous "Rough Dry" service will do all your washing and the ironing of all your flat work at a low rate per pound. Only the wearing apparel is left for you to iron at your convenience.

Kindly send a list with your washing and we guarantee to return every piece, and not to fade a single color.
