With Double Bill

Announcement has been made by Alexander Dean that the North Shore Theatre Guild will open its 1925-26 season with a double bill. The two productions on the program for the opening are "Plots and Playwrights," by Edward Massey, and "How He Lied to Her Husband," by Bernard

"Plots and Playwrights" has been In line with the suggestion of the announced several times in past years some years ago at Hull House in Chi-This committee is expected to de- cago and the people who saw it still

The second half of the play is burlesque, and when it is recalled how much guild audiences enjoyed "Fash-On motion of Commissioner Pres- ions," it will be clear that another

The story is about a wager between short story writer says there is a story on each one of the floors of a Commissioner Cheney presented near-by rooming house. He enters act is consumed with three interesting stories, dramatic, tens eand real. On motion of Commissioner Cheney It was revived at one of the large war camps in 1918 and more than one listener in the audience turned aside to brush from his manly cheek the furtive tear of sympathy for ever trustful mother and erring daughter.

The second act shows the meeting again of playwright and short story writer. The playwright has read the play and disapproves. He tells the writer how it should be written and we thereupon see the real stories from real life put upon the stage in a theatrical manner.

It is delightful burlesque, extremely farcical and amusing, and yet there is a good deal of definite satire and criticism on our theatre. "How He Lied to Her Husband" Bernard Shaw, is another satire. is his burlesque on his own play "Candida." The production by the guild is most timely in view of the recent production of "Candida" Chicago. It is also a satire on the triangle play of two men in love with the same woman. The play is seldom given in Chicago and yet it is Shaw

The guild will give its performance Club auditorium, Monday, November 9, at 8:15 p. m. The membership committee is happy to announce that the membership list is closed. The capacity of the hall has been reached except for a few seats which must be kept for single admissions at the

SCHUMANN-HEINK TO SING HERE NOV. 1

Appears on First Program All-Star Artists Series; Ticket Sale

Much interest is manifested in the appearance here on Nov. 16, of Madame Ernestine Schuman-Heink, who will furnish the first program of the All-Star Artists concert series arranged for the season. Sale of season tickets for these concerts, which will bring here some of the most noted musical artists, will positively close Nov. 9.

Few queens have reigned so long and with such complete sway in their song domain as Ernestine Schumann-Heink, and each succeeding concert season sees the popularity of this wonder-woman not only undiminished but increased. It is the combination of intellect and the will to excel together with the wonderful vocal organ, and musical genius that keeps stars who invariably attract capacity them all.
