THE GASOLINE TAX

The gasoline tax is another way to "get the money" as politicians in several states have found, and Illinois legislators are being pressed by the hungry office holders to afford them also this additional means of securing easy pickings. The tendency where the gasoline tax already is in force seems to be increase it. Some states have a tax as high as three cents a gallon, and in several instances proposals for increases have been made to raise the tax as high as six cents a gallon. Where is this sort of thing going to stop once it gets started? The gasoline tax is imposed on the theory that the automobile owners profit most from good roads, but it is safe to say that nobody is benefited by better highways more than the property owners along such roads. The automobile owner who pays the tax to build the roads is helping to increase the value of the property of every land owner along the routes, and rents are doubled and trebled as a result in many cases. With about 18 million motor vehicles registered in the United States there seems no reason why, if these owners would get together to oppose exorbitant taxation, they could not dictate to some extent where this taxing orgy shall stop.

BRAINS MOST NEEDED

The big corporations pay the largest salaries to purchase the service of men with brains which enable them to do the big things in all lines of endeavors, for by so doing the employers secure men able to furnish products to the public at the lowest possible prices. No stronger argument could be made against public ownership of utilities than that it would eliminate large salaried jobs.

It is possible for government to draft labor and material in time of war or national emergency, but it cannot conscript energy, ambition and brains in peace time. In war emergency the best men in all activities give of their services as a duty to their country, but in time of peace the motive which drives them to great achievements is the reward which is to be gained. A man with a salary for from $25,000 to $100,000 a year who can give the country all the great facilities and comforts which are regarded as necessary in the United States at reasonable prices is worth all he gets and more. In Europe where government ownership and control has been practiced in many lines for many years these facilities are still regarded as luxuries. What use are low-paid government employes if they cannot develop the service which private enterprise and initiative provides for the people of this country?

UNFAIR COMPETITION

The newspapers of the country are waging a vigorous campaign against the practice of the federal government in printing envelopes for sale in competition with the press of the country and hold that this is unfair competition and unjust in that it is the only instance in which the government discriminates against a legitimate commercial industry.

Press associations in many states have adopted resolutions urging opposition to this practice of the post office department and pledging support of measures to be introduced in congress aimed to stop the printing and sale of government stamped envelopes.

Emphatic protest is being made by the press associations to congress against what is felt to be an unjust and discriminatory custom of the government in this matter, in as much as they hold that the government furnishes these printed envelopes at a price below the actual cost of such printing and delivery, thereby taking this class of work away from printers to whom it justly should go, and saddling the deficit thus created upon the public at large.

In their efforts to secure congressional action to eliminate this condition of affairs the newspapers are endeavoring through the Envelope Legislative committee and through congressmen and senators from their respective districts. In this effort the public can aid materially by urging congressmen and senators to support the bill to eliminate this competition by the government against the printers of the country, and everybody interested is urged to help the printing interests in their fight for fair play in this matter of government envelope printing.
