ILLUMINATION PLAN CHRISTMAS FEATURE

DECORATING FRONT LAWN

Lights Among Evergreens is Becoming Favorite Idea for Holiday Season; Also Flower Boxes

In keeping with a custom being given nation-wide approval, many residents of this community are planning to illuminate the evergreens on the front lawn during the coming holiday season. President Coolidge will turn a switch on Christmas eve which will light the great national Christmas tree on the White House lawn, at which time community Christmas trees throughout the country will be simultaneously lighted.

The outdoor Christmas tree is one of the most beautiful customs adopted within the past few years. Glowing with lights, its many colors reflected against the snow-blanketed ground, the outdoor Christmas tree conveys a Yuletide message to all who pass.

Popular Custom
A short motor trip on Christmas eve last year revealed how popular this custom has become. But this year will see an even more extensive use of the outdoor Christmas display. It is not altogether necessary to own an evergreen growing on the front lawn; for several dollars one may be bought at a nearby store and the final results will be quite as pleasing as the permanent tree.

The problem of decorating is a task which can be solved according to individual taste and ability. The tree can be decorated with ornaments and lights or equally beautiful results can be obtained by using nothing more than strings of lights with clean snow placed on the boughs. An extension cord running from an electrical outlet in the basement will supply the necessary current for the lights.

Illuminated Flower Box
Another outdoor Christmas decoration which is rapidly gaining in favor is the illuminated flower box. Small evergreens; fir, cedar, basalm and other plants, form the background for the colored lights. Several boxes lighted in this manner form an entrancing spectacle against the more somber colors of the building.

With just a little skill, ingenuity and patience, the spirit of Christmas can be symbolized in this most beautiful of modern Christmas customs.

WHERE FURS COME FROM; BIG MARKET

St. Louis Is Greatest Clearing House; London, Leipzig and New York Also

London, Leipzig, New York and St. Louis are the world's greatest clearing houses for raw furs, and of them all, St. Louis is rated the largest. Furs from the frigid and the torrid zones converge upon the great markets in the north temperate zone. From "farthest North" comes pelts to Edmonton, Winnipeg, Montreal, and Quebec to match the catches of long ago in the famed Hudson's Bay country. From "Greenland's icy mountains and India's coral strand" furs are sent to London. America's Pacific ports receive skins from China, Japan, Manchuria and Korea, according to a writer in The Nation's Business.

Down to "the cape" go sturdy blacks, bearing great bundles of pelts on their heads to be shipped to London. And high up on the roof of the world, camel and donkey caravans are plodding through the Khyber Pass toward Peshawar, laden with furs from Tibet, Turkestan, Baluchistan and Afghanistan.

To Bombay the furs go by train; to London and New York they go by ship. Furs from the Scandinavian countries are transported to London and to Leipzig. Riga, once an important outlet for Siberian furs, has been almost overshadowed by Moscow under Soviet rule.

But camel caravans from Siberia and Mongolia still cross the Gobi desert to Urga with furs that go by rail to Tientsin or Shanghai, or to Manchuli on the line to Muklen and Harbin. Pack mules and porters shag furs down the western slopes of the Andes, and make on to Valparaiso and Antofagasta on the Pacific. Buenos Aires collects furs for London and New York from the Argentine, Paraguay, and Uruguay.

The supremacy of St. Louis among the world's markets for raw furs was established by its central location in the Mississippi basin, a region abounding in fur-bearing animals. St. Paul, Minneapolis, Chicago, Fort Wayne and New Orleans have always been important in the fur trade of the Mississippi valley.

Investment bankers are preparing a strong law to end "blue sky" issues. This problem will never be solved until we can find some way to abolish all the suckers.

President Coolidge lost his overcoat in a Chicago hotel, but he was lucky even to get away without an overcoat.

"TAKE WAR AWAY" SAYS YANKEE GIRL

GREEK REVOLT EPISODE

Distinguished Service Medal of Near East Relief Awarded to Brave American Woman; Details

The Near East Relief has announced the award of its distinguished service medal to Miss Emma D. Cushman of Boston, "for bravery under fire."

One morning last spring, during the so-called "Seventh Revolution" in Greece, Miss Cushman, who is the head of a Near East Relief training school for 1,000 orphans at Corinth, awoke to find five army airplanes on the campus outside her windows. They represented the rebel faction in the army, and were preparing for an attack from the loyal faction, which controlled the Greek navy.

Is Mayflower Daughter
Miss Cushman, a descendant of the Robert Cushman who chartered the Mayflower, was distinctly opposed to having any revolutions fought out on her doorstep. She first of all assembled her family of 1,000 children, and instructed them to flatten themselves on the earth at any indication of bombardment from the sea. It was a wise precaution, for the day had hardly begun when a trail of smoke to the northeast proclaimed the arrival of the loyalist forces by sea.

Sometime later a warship, once the American "Iowa" but now a Greek battleship, stole into the outer harbor, and long range shells began to whistle overhead. One dropped nine yards from Miss Cushman's office door. Another dropped near her clinic, where the doctor had forty little patients in the waiting room.

Airplanes Also
Before the day was over, there came also a squadron of loyalist airplanes, which dropped thousands of small slips of paper, inscribed with propaganda messages. Miss Cushman sent peremptory letter to the commanders of the opposing forces, demanding that they move their war away from her orphanage. No answers came, but during the night a ten-inch shell exploded on the campus, so close to a tent where 50 little trachoma patients were housed, that it got Miss Cushman out of bed and across the campus with her bathrobe flapping in the breeze. "Are you all right, boys?" she asked. "Oh, yes," they answered, "we did just as you told us." Every one of them, wise in the ways of war, was flat on the ground under his bed.

Sends Ultimatum
At daybreak the next morning Miss Cushman sent an ultimatum to the rebel garrison, demanding that the aeroplanes be moved away from the school. She waited an hour, and when no reply came, she summoned the largest of her boys and with their aid rolled the five big air birds off the campus and a half mile beyond. She followed this with a personal call on the commander of the battleship, demanding that he move the war somewhere else.

It is not known just how much her request had to do with terminating the little revolution. Revolutions in the Near East are frequently short-lived. This one lasted only three days, and when it was over Miss Cushman was invited to fly to Athens in one of the planes. But having pushed five of them for some distance through the sand, she felt it would be anti-climax to let one of them propel her through the air. "And besides," she says, "I do not like aeroplanes, and never will."

Long in Near East
Miss Cushman has lived in the Near East for many years, and has been one of the most important diplomatic figures in that troubled area. For nursing work in the Balkan war she was awarded the Queen Alexandra war medal by Great Britain. In 1919 she received the French Cross of the Legion of Honor for humanitarian work with the Near East Relief in Turkey. During the past year she has won the Gold Cross of the Holy Sepulchre and the Greek Cross of St. Xavier for her work among refugee children after the Smyrna disaster.

Experts at Washington say that more weather data is needed for aviation. But what it really needs is not more but better weather.
