"Enclosed Car" Motor

Introduced at New York Show

Our showrooms are now devoted to a Special Nash Exhibit that practically duplicates the great New York Show display.

Here you may view personally the important new Nash developments—particularly the great new Nash "Enclosed Car" Motor.

In creating this new motor Nash deliberately disregarded general precedent which was accustomed to shape the capabilities of a motor to open car requirements.

On the contrary, Nash especially engineered this motor to provide the finest calibre of performance for the enclosed car.

In utter smoothness, in quietness and in phenomenal acceleration, this new "Enclosed Car" Motor clearly outdistances all that has gone before.

It creates an absolutely new standard of enclosed car performance that will prove a revelation to you—for it is surpassingly superior in every phase of operation.

There's a full 25% greater volume of symmetrically smooth power—power without a single "rough spot" thruout the entire range.

And the speed with which you accelerate is lightning-like—23% faster than formerly in going from any given rate to a higher rate.

Yet your travel-cost per gallon of fuel is held down to the old low level.

And so expertly is the motor designed and constructed that under average driving conditions you may drive it to a mileage high in the five-figure class without further thought except to change oil at the usual periods.

GIVES SUMMARY OF PROHIBITION LAW

FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION

Chicago Woman's Club Issues Bulletin Containing Its Salient Features in Brief Form

The prohibition law enforcement committee of the Chicago Woman's club presents this information:

"Ignorance of the law excuses no man," and so every citizen must know the law and obey it. Every national, state and local officer takes an oath to support the constitution and laws which he must not only obey but enforce.

Some important provisions of the United States law concerning intoxicating liquor are noted below.

United States Constitution, Amendment XVIII:

Section 1.—"After one year from the ratification of this article, the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States, and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof, for beverage purposes, is hereby prohibited.

Section 2.—"The congress and the several states, shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

The Volstead Law
Portions of the United States statute, known as the Volstead law:

Intoxicating liquor is defined to include "alcohol, brandy, whiskey, rum, gin, beer, ale, porter and wine, and in addition thereto any spirituous, vinous, malt or fermented liquor, liquids and compounds, whether medicated, proprietary, patented or not, and by whatever name called, containing one-half of one percentum or more of alcohol by volume, which are fit for beverage purposes."—Section 10138½a.

Manufacture, sale, barter, transportation, importation, exportation, delivery, furnishing and possession of intoxicating liquor are prohibited, except as otherwise provided for sacramental, medicinal, industrial and toilet purposes and the provisions of this act are to be liberally construed to the end that intoxicating liquor as a beverage may be prevented.—Section 10138½a.

No one excepting physicians holding permits to prescribe is authorized to issue prescriptions for liquor.—Section 10138½cc.

No physician shall prescribe, in the aggregate, more than one-half pint of alcohol for use by any person within any period of ten days. No physician shall be furnished with more than 100 prescription blanks for use in any period of ninety days except for some extraordinary reason.—Section 10138½ccc.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue and his agents shall investigate and report violations of this act. Any Chancellor, Judge of a Supreme or Superior court, the mayor of a city, Chief Judge of the Common Pleas court, justice of the peace, or other magistrate in the state where the offense is committed, is authorized to make arrests and issue search warrants.—Section 10138½a.

Advertising, manufacturing, selling or possession of preparations or formulas, or any utensil, contrivance or machine for use in unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquor is prohibited.—Section 10138½i.

It is unlawful to solicit or receive an order for liquor, or give information how it may be obtained in violation to the act, or to permit an employe to do so.—Section 10138½ii.

Any person injured by reason of intoxication of any person has right of action against any person contributing to such intoxication by selling liquor or assisting and procuring it. This right survives in cases of death of either party, to or against the executor, etc.—Section 10138½j.

A place where intoxicating liquor is manufactured, sold, etc., unlawfully, is declared a common nuisance; with a penalty on persons maintaining such nuisance; fines and costs will be a lien on the premises, if the owner has knowledge or reason to believe his property is being so used.—10138½k.

The courts have power to issue injunctions against such nuisances and may order the places closed for one year.—Section 10138½k.

Vehicles discovered transporting liquors contrary to law are to be seized by the officer discovering them, and the person in charge arrested and proceeded against. Liquor is to be destroyed on conviction.—Section 10138½mm.

Possession of liquor by persons not legally permitted, is prima facie evidence of intent to violate the law. The burden of proof is on the possessor to prove that it was lawfully acquired, possessed and used.—Section 10138½t.

The penalty for manufacturing or selling liquor is, for the first offense, a fine of not more than $1,000, or imprisonment not exceeding six months. Increased penalties are provided for the second offence.—Section 10138½p.

No person is excused from testifying on the ground that his evidence would tend to incriminate him.—Section 10138½q.

Many of the big speculative booms are merely due to a loud explosion of gas.

TRUE ROMANCE

"THE ROMANCE OF THE AMERICAN THEATRE"

By Caroline Crawford
Little Brown & Co.

When Mary Caroline Crawford gives as title to her book "The Romance of the American Theatre" she presents a challenge to herself to show us that romance. And this she has most admirably done.

The early part of the book is given over partly to a rather detailed history of the early stirrings of the drama in America, detailed because when the first edition of this work was published some dozen years ago there existed no adequate history of this important period. Since that time several histories have been written, but nevertheless Miss Crawford in this revised and amplified edition has kept the early history, and added to it the history of a number of the old theatrical managers, and also that of negro minstrelsy and the "Yankee type" of drama. Some delicious sidelights on our ancestors are to be had from this study of their attitude to the theatre. Its description as "The High Road to Hell" was among the mildest of their epithets.

At the point when the history of the drama through the introduction of the "starring" system, became a matter of outstanding personalities Miss Crawford has taken these personalities as her theme. And each of them is brought before us in varying degrees of vividness according to the impression of the personality of the subject made on the world around him.

There are the great English stars beginning with Nance Oldfield about whom an excellent minister recorded ingeniously, "Last week I buried Mrs. Oldfield very willingly and with much satisfaction." George Frederick Cooke and Edmund Kean, among the earliest stars to rise on our bleak—as it appeared to them—horizon, though they were received graciously as artists, took care to offend the hopeless provincials in their social connections. The great Rachel, the divine Sarah are vividly presented.

Nor has Miss Crawford neglected our own firmament from Booth to Barrymore.

The author has had an extremely interesting subject and she has made good use of her opportunities. She has succeeded in the difficult task of neither effacing her own personality nor pushing it too much to the foreground.

"The Rector of Maliseet" by Leslie Reid begins like a good mystery story. There is in the style the same attention to detail, the same skill which seems to come from a necessary preoccupation with technique, the same lightly dropped hints that events of dark moment are to follow. It is also told in the first person, which seems to be a habit of mystery stories. As the story advances we see that the mystery is not in exterior things but in a man's inner struggle with himself.

A good man, the raconteur of our story, goes into the village of Maliseet in Rathshire, to act as secretary to a man known only to him by hearsay, the Rector of Maliseet. Immediately upon his arrival the young man is conscious of a strange all-pervasive atmosphere of gloom about the house occupied by the Rector, his old mother, and his cold almost rude daughter.

The new secretary throws himself with enthusiasm into his work, which has to do with the arrangement of notes on early obscure Christian saints and hermits. He comes upon one story, that of the Abbot Ambrose, which interests him more than any other. But the mysterious fact is that the last pages of the story have been torn away. The secretary ponders on this and gradually becomes convinced that the life of the Abbot has some definite, perhaps sinister effect on the lives of the people around him.

Little by little the story is pieced together and the shreds of mystery are torn away to let the inevitable light of love shine through.

Mr. Reid writes with more finish than the average "first novelist," he has a sense of the dramatic, but lacks chiefly the power to bring you close to his characters.
