CLASS EFFICIENCY ALWAYS MAINTAINED

AT THE STATE UNIVERSITY

Despite Heavy Enrollment, Normal Sized Groups are Given Instruction, According to Accepted Idea

Contrary to the current opinion that a large enrollment in an educational institution decreases the efficiency of the work an investigation of the conditions at the University of Illinois shows that, despite the increasing registration in that institution, the general size of the classes is in accordance with the accepted standards which permit efficient instruction.

An investigation at the request of President David Kinley, showed that classes were normal in size and that the existence of large numbers did not constitute a limitation on the efficiency and work.

President Explains "It is clear," says President Kinley, "that if rapidly growing enrollment meant abnormally large classes, increasing number of poor teachers, inadequate equipment, long continued inadequate space for classes, laboratories, and so forth, the educational standard would surely be lowered. The facts show that at the University of Illinois, excepting the short period in 1919 and 1920 when the first great wave of increase came, these difficult conditions have been successfully met.

Many Classes "A thousand students can be taught just as effectively at one institution and the same subject at the same time by dividing them into 40 class groups as they could be if each of the group of 25 were in a separate institution," he points out. "Some people ask whether we can get teachers enough under the circumstances. If we cannot get them, how could they be gotten if the classes were at forty different places? The same number of teachers of the same teaching ability is required in either case."

Larger Classes There will always be a few large classes, he explained, even though it be theoretically possible to split them up because some particular instructor is highly popular, highly successful in his work, or his subject is exceedingly attractive. In these instances in order that all who desire to take the course may do so it is necessary that the enrollment be allowed to exceed the normal number since the instructor is unable to repeat the course several times in one day or even in a week. The authorities deem it more advisable to allow a larger number of students to receive the inspiration of contact with such instructors than to allow only a few a closer and longer contact.

MIGHTY CHORUS TO SING AT "SESQUI"

A mighty chorus of five thousand voices will commemorate in song the deeds of the patriots of the country, when on July 5 the chorus of the States and the Festival Chorus will sing before President Coolidge and an audience of more than 200,000 at the stadium in Philadelphia as one of the features of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, to be held from June 1 to December 1. The plans for this elaborate musical program as outlined by Dr. Herbert J. Tily, chairman of the music committee, indicate that this chorus will be the greatest ever heard in this country. Every state in the union will be represented in this assemblage.

WORD PICTURE OF PRE-HISTORIC U. S.

TEN MILLION YEARS AGO

Margaret Bradley Fuller Tells of Great Animals Which Haunted America in Ancient Times

Margaret Bradley Fuller, an instructor in geology at Northwestern university in a recent talk presented a word picture of North America ten million years ago. She described many of the animals which roamed over the eastern and central part of the United States in those prehistoric days and brought her audience at the Chicago Academy of Science in Lincoln park close to our animal ancestors of those ancient days. Incidentally, Miss Fuller stated that the famous Dinosaurs, which left their eggs to be preserved in granite in far-away China, roamed in our own states and that fossils no doubt will ultimately be discovered in North America. Expeditions then need not be sent to China for that purpose. Speaking of the Dinosaur, Dr. Fuller said:

Weighed Many Tons "Some were nearly eighty feet long and weighed many tons; others were no bigger than a chicken. All of them had compact bodies, long tails and good legs, capable of running and walking, some on all fours like modern quadrupeds, others only on the hind legs with a stout tail to balance the rest of the body. All of them had large mouths and sharp teeth to grasp their prey and tear it in spite of its struggles."

Dr. Fuller added a bit later in her address, "In North America we have not as yet found any Dinosaur eggs. But since their near relatives in China are known to have made nests and laid many eggs in them, it is quite likely that our North American ones did likewise."

Illustrated With Slides The address was illustrated with lantern slides and Dr. Fuller displayed excellent pictures of nests of dinosaur eggs, as shown by recent fossils discovered by the Roy Chapman Andrews expedition to China. In those middle ages of the geological period, there also were dinosaurs which were amphibious and whose bulk exceeded all of their contemporaries, Miss Fuller explained. "These beasts probably lived mostly in the water submerged about to the hips so that they were partly buoyed up," she stated. "They reared their long, snake-like heads and necks to see about, and fed on the soft water plants in the swamps. This is the creature whose brain was smaller than his spinal cord. He was very stupid. All his motions were instinctive and the whole mechanism of the body was controlled by the thick part of the spinal cord in the sacral region just above the hips. All of these reptiles were singularly lacking in intelligence and the body, bigger than an elephant, was guided by a spinal cord two feet thick at whose end was a brain which would hardly fill a teacup."

Compliments Picture Referring to a recent motion picture, "The Lost World," in which prehistoric beasts were displayed in all their ferocity, attacking each other, Dr. Fuller complimented it, and said that she believed it to be a fairly accurate representation. Of the terrifying animals shown in that picture, the speaker said in part:

"In the case of the Tyrannosaurus, the teeth of the marauder were not set in sockets but were loose in grooves. As a result, the completion of a full meal meant the loss of many teeth. Frequently, around the scratched and bitten bones lie the teeth of the hungry monster. These ferocious beasts were armed by claws more than four inches long and had a fleetness and spring in their movements gained from walking on their toes."

Dr. Fuller said that there is real scientific value in the fossils of these animals, occasionally dug up here and there in different parts of the globe. She said the care in fitting the fossil bones together is extreme and that only the best-trained scientists can do this work properly. These fossils are a great aid in explaining the evolution of various animals.

FAMOUS OLD WARSHIP AT SESQUICENTENNIAL

The frigate Constellation, a certain ship of the famous Constitution, will be one of the Navy's historic exhibits displayed at the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia, June 1 to December 1. Admiral A. H. Scales, commandant of the Philadelphia Navy Yard, informed Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick, president of the Exposition association, last week that the ancient ship will be put into condition and transported to Philadelphia in time for the Sesqui.

The Constellation, one of the first six frigates authorized by congress as a basis of the United States navy, is a 36-gun vessel of 1,265 tons. It was launched at Baltimore on September 7, 1797, to become famous in the French war in 1800.

Its cost was $314,212 as compared with the millions of dollars which are spent upon a single battleship in the twentieth century.

MANY DEPORTABLE ALIENS IN THE U. S.

Said to Be 30,000 of Them in New York City Alone; Cost of Sending Back

There has been a great deal of notice given in the newspapers of late to the matter of deporting undesirable aliens from the United States. Recently the question became acute in Chicago with reference to the gun warfare in that city, and a number of aliens were rounded up for deportation. According to officials of the immigration department, it is difficult to get a line on the exact number of deportable aliens in the United States. It is thought however that the number may reach the tremendous figure of 1,300,000, although some of those who have studied the question believe that 250,000 would be nearer the correct figure.

It is estimated that the deporting of 250,000 undesirable aliens would cost around $25,000,000. There are said to be 30,000 of them in the New York district alone.

Henry H. Curran, immigration commissioner at Ellis Island, New York, believes that the government should appropriate immediately the funds necessary to deport undesirable aliens, sending them back to the ports from which they came.

"It is my firm belief," said Mr. Curran, "that if quick, effective action were taken for the expulsion of every alien known to be in the country in violation of law, and was pursued for a reasonable period of time, say two years, irrespective of the cost, it would be a most economical procedure on the part of the government. Not only would thousands of dollars be saved to the taxpayers for maintenance of those who become inmates of public institutions, but the effect upon aliens who now believe that they can gain admission to and remain in this country illegally with impunity would be so great that their efforts to gain such admission would to a very large extent cease."

The present congress has already won an exceptionally high rating for industry and efficiency. It has shown unusual poise and balance and a marked disposition to legislate in a truly representative manner.—New York Herald-Tribune.
